TO THE CONSUMERS OF GAS in the CITY OF SYDNEY.—The SYDNEY GAS COMPANY is established for the purpose of supplying a pure Gas at a moderate cost. To accomplish this object, it is necessary that consumers themselves should co-operate with the promoters in its formation; and, for the furtherance of this end, it has been provided that every consumer shall be allowed to secure any number of shares up to 50. If the call thus made be responded to, the parties most interested will have a large voice (if not the preponderance) in the control of the Company's affairs, and in the event of success will receive a DOUBLE DIVIDEND, in the shape of an actual return and a DIMINISHED GAS BILL. The calls have been so arranged, with a view to meet the convenience of small holders, and it is not contemplated that anything beyond the deposit will be required for more than a twelvemonth.
An early response to this application is respectfully requested.

It has long been thought desirable by the consumers of gas in Sydney, that a city of so large extent, and so numerous a population, should have the advantage of a second Gas Company, in order that the increasing wants of the community should be promptly met, and that by means of a wholesome competition, a supply of pure gas may be obtained at a moderate rate. The neighbouring metropolis of Victoria possesses two gas companies, and it is thought that with the advantages possessed by Sydney, as situated in the centre of our Coal-fields, this enterprise presents every encouragement for the expectation of a remunerative return on the capital invested. It has therefore been proposed to form a company, to be called the "Sydney Gas Company," with a capital of £250,000, in 50,000 shares of £5 each.
It is estimated that the capital abovenamed will be more than sufficient for the purposes of this company; the entire plant and works of the Melbourne Gas Company, which is capable of supplying four-and-a-half million cubic feet of gas per week, having cost about that sum. The works of the Ballaarat Gas Company, supplying 400,000 cubic feet of gas per week, cost £39,000, under the disadvantage of having had to cart the whole of their plant from Hobson's Bay.
As regards profits, without entering into details, the provisional committee confidently appeal to the past history of the Australian Gas-light Company. For many years this company has paid a steady dividend of fifteen per cent. on its paid-up capital, besides which, it has been quietly and steadily extending its field of operations, year after year, without any commensurate increase of the capital account.
The new company will start under the most favourable auspices. Every modern improvement in the making of gas economically, will be availed of, and the great mains will be of sufficient size, to ensure an abundant and unfailing supply, both to the city and its suburbs, with the capability of meeting any public emergency.
It is confidently anticipated that the purity of the gas supplied will encourage its use in private houses, and in this way open up an extensive and comparatively unused source of profit.
It will be the special duty of the provisional committee (or the directors elected) not to expend any of the subscribed capital (except for the purchase of land) until the services of an experienced practical engineer have been engaged to superintend the works and selection of plant, &c.
Several eligible sites are in view, and the land can be purchased as soon as the company is formed.
It is proposed to invite consumers to take shares to the number of 50 or less, and to allot such shares absolutely. Capitalists are then invited to subscribe for the remainder of the shares, which will be alloted pro rata to the applicants. No application will be entertained for more than 1000 shares. A deposit of £1 per share will be called for on allotment, and the remainder paid up as required in instalments of £1 per share, three months' notice of each call being made in the daily papers.
It is proposed that five directors shall be elected from among the provisional committee, and auditors and trustees appointed at the first meeting of shareholders.
The deed of settlement, as prepared by the company's solicitors, under the supervision of the provisional committee, will be laid on the table for the signature of the shareholders at the same time.
Application will be made to the Legislature for an Act of Incorporation limiting the liability of the shareholders, as soon as the company is formed.
Applications for shares must be sent in THIS DAY, to the offices of either of the brokers of the company, from whom prospectuses and forms of application may be obtained.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

WESTMINSTER, APRIL 18.
SITTINGS IN BANCO.
BEFORE Lord Chief Justice Cockburn, Mr. Justice Crompton, Mr. Justice Blackburn, and Mr. Justice Mellor.
APRIL 19.

CAMPBELL v. SPOTTISWOODE.

This was the action against the Saturday Review, which was tried at the last Guildhall sittings before the Lord Chief Justice, and resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, with leave to move on the question of law reserved by his lordship (on account, as he said, of its great importance) as to the extent of the admitted right of a journalist to make comments upon the published sentiments, opinions, or proposals of other persons on matters of public interest. The action was brought by one journalist against another, for it was an action by the Rev. Dr. Campbell, editor and part proprietor of the British Standard and Ensign, religious newspapers, against the printer of the Saturday Review for an article in that journal on the 14th of June last commenting on certain letters and announcements in the plaintiff's paper. The letters were by the plaintiff, and entitled "Missions to China," and in the papers in which they appeared were appended thereto certain announcements and appeals to the religious public, of which the following, signed by the publisher, is a specimen:—

"Co-operation is earnestly invited to aid in sending forth on all sides arguments and appeals, calculated to awaken compassion for the lost millions of the land of China." "The free circulation list now amounts to upwards of 20,000 copies, included in which are the following:—The hon. Charlotte Margaretta Thompson, Prior-park, Bath, 5000; the Earl of Gainsborough, 1000; the Earl of Shaftesbury, 1000; the Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, 1000; the Rev. Dr. —— and friends, 1000. While this is worthy of the generous donors and the matchless cause, it is full of encouragement to the editor and highly cheering to myself. I do trust that the noble example here set will have the effect of calling the attention of many Christians of zeal and means who have hitherto neglected China."

In another of the lists of subscribers for copies for distribution were the following, "R. G., 380 copies, A London Minister, 120; an Old Soldier, 100." And various letters were likewise published, one of which ran thus:—

"Ah would we have our great Protestant principles, privileges, and blessings more widely propagated and more securely perpetuated, then let us to a man willingly, liberally, and prayerfully set up an Ensign for the nations. Put me down for 500 copies."

Upon these announcements and appeals the article complained of as libellous commented, and the following were the passages selected as the subject of complaint,—

"The doctor refers frequently to Mr. Thompson as his authority—so frequently that we must own to having had a transitory suspicion that Mr. T. was nothing more than another Mrs. Harris, and to believe, with Mrs. Gamp's acquaintance, that 'there never was no such person.' But as Mr. Thompson's name is down for 5000 copies of the Ensign, we must accept his identity as fully proved, and we hope the publisher of the Ensign is equally satisfied on the point. Certain it is that Mr. Thompson knows more about China than anybody else in England."

"To spread the knowledge of the Gospel in China would be a good and an excellent thing, and worthy of all praise and encouragement; but to make such a work a mere pretext for puffing an obscure newspaper into circulation, is a most scandalous and flagitious act, and it is this act, we fear, we must charge against Dr. Campbell. Buy the letters, and save the heathen. About twenty-five letters will be 'required;' they must be circulated widely, and for this 'I am wholly dependent on the good offices of the friends of the heathen.' There is no disguise in all this. Letters from correspondents, all bearing the mark of one hand, put the matter on a very simple basis. 'Ah,' writes one, 'would we have our great Protestant principles, privileges, and blessings more widely propagated, and more securely perpetuated, then let us to a man willingly, liberally, and prayerfully set up an Ensign for the nations.' The good soul adds, 'put me down for 500 copies.'

"There have been many dodges tried to make a losing paper 'go,' but it remained for a leader in the Nonconformist body to represent the weekly subscription as an act of religious duty. Moreover, the well-known device is resorted to of publishing lists of subscribers, the authenticity of which the public have, to say the least, no means of checking. 'R. G.' takes 240 copies; 'A London Minister,' 120; 'An Old Soldier,' 100; and so on. Few readers, we imagine, will have any doubt in their minds as to who is the 'Old Soldier.'

"Whatever may be the private views of the editor of the Ensign, there can be no question that his followers are sincere enough in the confidence they repose in his plan, and it must be a very happy thing to be gifted with so large a stock of faith. It must take the sting out of many a sorrow, and smooth away many a trouble. The past cannot be very sad, nor the future very dreadful, to him who has the capacity for hoping all things and believing all things without hesitation. If this temper of mind should lay its possessor open occasionally to the begullements of an impostor, more than an equivalent is provided in the freedom from doubts and suspicions and the sense of security that it confers. The tenderer of observation and experience will scarcely be he to impart so great a privilege to those who have it not by nature; yet it is often by this blind trust in everything and everybody that much good is done. People who never can perceive a difficulty are very likely to succeed in what ever they undertake. No doubt it is deplorable to find an intellectual imbecility manifested among a class of the community entitled, en many grounds, to respect; but now and then this very credulity may be turned to good account. Dr. Campbell is just now making use of it for a very practical purpose, and to-morrow some other religious speculator will cry his wares in the name of Heaven, and the mob will hasten to deck him out in purple and fine linen. When Dr. Campbell has finished his 'Chinese Letters' he will be a greater simpleton than we take him for if he does not force off another 100,000 copies of his paper by launching a fresh series of thunderbolts against the powers of darkness. In the meanwhile, there can be no doubt that he is making a very good thing indeed of the spiritual wants of the Chinese."

This article having been published on the 14th of June last, the plaintiff's attorney, on the 28th of June, wrote to the Saturday Review to desire that an "ample apology" should be inserted, with a declaration that there was reason to believe that the charges made against him were utterly unfounded, such apology to be sent to him for approval, and to appear in the next number, in the same type as the libel, and in a similar position. The defendant's attorney wrote to request that the passages charged as libellous might be specified. The plaintiff's attorney in reply wrote that there could be no difficulty in discovering what those passages were, and that if his request were not complied with in the course of the morrow, he should take proceedings, for he could not admit to the imputations of being an "impostor," or "guilty of scandalous and flagitious conduct." The defendant's attorney, in answer, wrote, "It appears to us, from the context, that the words complained of are used merely as part of a criticism on a newspaper article, and are not intended to attack the character of the writer. If you will point out any statements of matter-of-fact which you consider erroneous, it shall be corrected in the Review." The plaintiff's attorney, in reply, suggested that he and the publisher should meet the defendants' attorney, with all the books and documents, and satisfy them that the important imputations of fraud were erroneous. The defendants' attorney, in reply, stated in effect that there were any such imputations, and said that it would be better to point out in writing what was complained of. The reply to this on the part of the plaintiff's attorney was the writ in this action (on the 14th of July last). In acknowledging which the defendants' attorney declared his regret that the opportunity had not been afforded of correcting any erroneous statement of matter of fact; the present action being thus brought. Thus, from the first it will be seen the Saturday Review took the ground now relied upon by its counsel that there were no independent assertions or statements of fact in it, but only matter of comment on the plaintiff's own publication and inferences therefrom. The case for the plaintiff at the trial was rested chiefly on the view that the article imputed to him fabricated letters and fictitious subscription lists, and the persons referred to were called, and proved their own existence and the reality of their letters. In particular, Mr. Thompson, of Prior-park, the husband of the lady alluded to, was called as a witness, and it turned out that he was a friend of the plaintiff's, and had promoted the "letters." Mr. Bovill, the counsel for the Saturday Review, contended that the meaning of the article was in effect this—that it was a most improper thing to represent the subscription to the plaintiff's paper as a religious act, or as likely to promote the welfare of the heathen, and that the phrases "scandalous," "impostures," &c., referred to that, and were fairly within the privilege of comments by one public writer upon the published proposals of another. Mr. Serjeant Parry, the counsel for the plaintiff, on the other hand, in reply, pressed the construction that the article imputed to the plaintiff that he fabricated letters or put forth fictitious subscriptions as decoys to induce the public to subscribe. This view seems to have been adopted by the Lord Chief Justice, who, it will be seen, directed his jury, in substance, as a matter of law, that if such was the meaning of the article, it was not privileged. The principal passages in the summing up were as follow:—

"The article, no doubt, was written with considerable bitterness. It was pungent, bitter, and caustic, and evidently written by a writer of great power, and one who well knew how to deal with an adversary in a manner to render him ridiculous; at the same time public men, and above all public writers, must not complain if they are somewhat roughly treated. Public writers who exposed themselves to criticism, must not complain that such criticism is sometimes hostile. The writers of the Review might have thought Dr. Campbell's view a legitimate object of hostile observation. Nor was it matter of complaint that the article was written in a spirit of hostility, ridicule, and satire. But particular passages were complained of as libellous; and it was said that they imputed to the plaintiff that he acted on sordid and base motives, and that therefore he was entitled to damages. It would be for the jury to judge of the effect of those passages. They might be divided under two heads: first, that Dr. Campbell had made certain untrue statements as to sources whence he had derived subscriptions, and used them as decoys to get further subscriptions; that it was said especially that he was in the habit of referring to a gentleman named Thompson, and that he was a fictitious person, and that he put down anonymous contributions; and that this, again, was suggested to be a fraud on those whom he induced, by the supposed example of persons represented as contributors, to put their names down as subscribers. All these representations were charged as libellous. And then, under the second head, it was complained that it was said that the plaintiff put forward to the public the great religious enterprise of converting to Christianity the 400 millions of Chinese, at present in a state of spiritual destitution, and that he asked for contributions for that purpose when it was not intended to get them for that purpose, but to increase the circulation of his newspaper, and that thus he was using a great and powerful motive—appealing to the highest considerations and the most solemn duties, as a means, not of promoting the spread of Christianity, but his own sordid interests. Such was the second head of complaint. It was said, on the other hand, that this was not so, and that it was only legitimate criticism and discussion of the fair merits of this scheme of the plaintiff's, with a view to show that it was idle and absurd and must end in disappointment and delusion, and that the Review had a right to comment upon it. Now, it was not to be disputed that the plaintiff's proposal was open to the fullest extent to discussion and criticism of a severe and hostile character. Dr. Campbell made an appeal to the public on a subject not only of public interest but of sacred and universal interest—the spread of Christianity throughout the heathen world, and he did so through the columns of his newspaper. It was impossible to conceive any subject on which comment and criticism might more fairly be made, and any writer who thought that this proposal of the plaintiff could only end in disappointment to the public who might be induced to subscribe to his paper, and that they would be throwing away their money, would have a perfect right to comment upon it, with some latitude of criticism and comment. But the question was whether the one or the other of the two views suggested of the effect of the article was correct. Was the effect of these passages merely to comment on the reasonableness of the plaintiff's proposal, or did they impute, not only that it was delusive, but that it was induced by the base and sordid motive of promoting his own pecuniary interest? First, with reference to Mr. Thompson, was it represented that he was a fictitious person, so that it was an imputation upon the character of the plaintiff for veracity and integrity in his referring to an imaginary and non-existing person? Was that the effect of the passage in the libel? Or was it no more than to detract, in a tone of banter, from the authority of a person so often referred to? If the former was the meaning, certainly it was a mistake, for Mr. Thompson had appeared in person before them. But might not the passage receive a milder construction? Thus was of less importance than the other part of the libel complained of; but it was for the jury to consider, and if they thought that it was intended to charge against Dr. Campbell the intentionally putting forward of fictitious persons to deceive and delude the public, it was for them to say what importance they attached to it. But there was another matter under the same head which was of more serious import; for to say of a man that he was appealing to the public for subscriptions, and that, to obtain them, he put down the names of non-existing subscribers, was surely to charge him with fraud. Let every man judge for himself whether he would not deem it a reflection on his character and honour; and it was for the jury to say whether this was the meaning of the article. "Moreover, a well-known device is adopted," &c. "There have been dodges tried to make a losing paper pay," &c. It was for the jury to judge of these expressions, how far they made this serious imputation upon the plaintiff's character. Then, coming to the next head of libel—that which related to the proposal to subscribe to the plaintiff's newspaper—this was not quite fairly represented by the learned counsel for the defendant, as if all that the doctor proposed was that persons should send their subscriptions to his paper; and the fair mode of putting it was that they should support a journal which he would situate subscriptions for the missions. It would be absurd for the plaintiff to ask persons to co-operate in the work of missions merely by buying copies of his paper. It must be taken as his meaning, and the meaning of the subscribers, that these letters were intended to arouse the religious world to a sense of their duty to make every effort to support missions. The parties interested in missions might very fairly believe that an appeal to the public on the subject might produce great effects. But it was perfectly lawful for a public writer to say that it was an idle scheme, and that it was a delusion to suppose that by forcing these papers into circulation by free distribution the great cause of missions would be promoted, and, in short, to denounce the whole scheme as pernicious and delusive. And if you think that this is all which has really been done in this case, then it is within the fair and legitimate scope of criticism, and then you ought to find your verdict for the defendant. But the question is whether the writer has not gone beyond these limits, and whether he has not gone the length of imputing to Dr. Campbell not merely that he has proposed a delusive and mischievous scheme, but that he has done so with the sordid motive of abusing the confidence of the public on subjects the most holy and sacred, and for the pitiful purpose of increasing the subscriptions to his newspaper. If you think that, then the case assumes a different character. It is said that the circumstances were such as not only to entitle the writers of the Review to criticise in a hostile spirit the scheme of the plaintiff, but also to impute to him sordid and base motives in putting it forward, for that it is obvious that it could do good to nobody but the proprietors of the paper. I own, however, that my view of the law does not accord with this. A public writer is fully entitled to comment upon the conduct of a public man, and that matter was a fair subject of comment. But it cannot be said that because a man is a public man a public writer is entitled not only to pass a judgment upon his conduct, but to ascribe to him corrupt and dishonest motives. That, in my view, is not the law, and the privilege of comment does not go to that extent. Take the case of a statesman. His public conduct is open to criticism in speeches or in writings. But has any one a right to say that he has sold himself, or that he has been inspired by base and sordid motives, unless prepared to justify those allegations as true? Take the case of a general in command of a fortress who has surrendered it earlier than the necessity of the case, in the opinion of others, required. His conduct in so doing would be open to the most severe criticism, but would there be a right to say that he had betrayed the fortress into the hands of the enemy for a corrupt consideration? Surely not; and in such a case, if such an imputation were made, it must be justified as true. Take the case of a treaty concluded by a statesman with a foreign Power; suppose its terms to be disastrous to the country. Its terms would be open to the most severe criticism and the most righteous condemnation; but would there be a right to say that the statesman had sold his country? I think not. At the same time I feel the great importance of the question. No doubt the liberty of the press is of very vast importance, and the privilege of commenting on the public conduct of public men cannot be too highly appreciated; and if you see your way to the conclusion that the writer had a bona fide belief that the plaintiff in his invitations to the public to subscribe, was actuated by a desire, not to promote the cause of Christianity, but his own sordid interests, although I should still say that it is not a ground on which you could find a verdict for the defendant, yet you may find that matter specially to be in his favour; for it is a question of such great importance that, although my own opinion upon it is clear, still, as it is now for the first time raised in a court of justice, I will give the defendant leave to raise it in the full Court, by moving to enter the verdict for him, if you find a verdict against him, or should your finding be such as thus to raise the question. Even, however, although your verdict should be for the plaintiff, yet, when you come to consider the question of damages, you must take into account all the circumstances of the case. And it is to be regretted that the means proposed by the plaintiff to carry out his ends should have been of a somewhat doubtful character. It certainly does at first sight seem to be so when a man says, 'Here is a great work—a work in which all Christians should unite.' And how is it to be accomplished? 'Subscribe to my newspaper.' It does sound odd, and provokes the suggestion that it is not so much the interests of religion which the man has in his mind as the promotion of the circulation of his own paper. And when a person not imbued with his religious views comments upon the case, it might easily suggest itself to his mind that that point of view, You may think that there was no ground for it, but still, if it might naturally suggest itself to the mind, you must make some allowance for the position of the writer, who may have been influenced by a sense of public duty; for I cannot help saying that I think the counsel for the plaintiff went too far when he stated that the object of the article was to impute to him that the plaintiff. There, then, was a strong spirit of antagonism naturally aroused by these very conflicting views on a matter connected with religious opinions, and the writer in the Review, no doubt, sat down to attack the plaintiff, not as the individual, but as the representative, and as the author of a scheme which if he has, in doing what he might conceive to be his duty, unjustly aspersed the plaintiff, we must still look at the matter as one arising out of a public controversy, and not as one in which there was any intention to wound and injure the plaintiff. The whole matter is now in your hands. If you think that the only effect of the article was fairly to discuss the proposal of the plaintiff, then find for the defendant. If you think that the effect is to impute base and sordid motives, then your verdict ought to be for the plaintiff. If, at the same time, you are of opinion that the writer did so under an honest and genuine belief that the plaintiff was fairly open to these charges, I invite you to find you find your verdict for the plaintiff with such damages as you think proper, to find that matter of fact specially, and I shall, in that event, reserve leave to the defendant to move to enter the verdict for him, if the Court should be of opinion that the matter of fact so found is in his favour entitling him to the verdict."

The jury retired to consider their verdict, and returned, after the lapse of an hour, with a verdict for the plaintiff for £50, at the same time finding especially "that the writer in the Saturday Review believed his imputations to be well founded."

Mr. Bovill, Q.C., on behalf of the Saturday Review, now moved for a rule to set this verdict aside on the ground of misdirection, and also on the ground that it was against evidence. The learned counsel animadverted upon the announcements which had appeared in the plaintiff's papers, and which, he said, were obviously of a nature to stimulate subscriptions thereto, upon the pretence of promoting the conversion of the heathen.

The Court said no doubt this was all fit subject for ridicule, but if the comments went beyond ridicule and made personal imputations, then they must be prepared to be excused on the ground of privilege or justified on the ground of truth. In this case the scope of the article seemed to be, that the Doctor was not merely puffing his papers under the pretence of converting the heathen, but that he was going this to put money into his own pocket; and, further, that he fabricated letters and put forth fictitious subscriptions with that object. Now, this amounted in effect to a charge of obtaining money under false pretences. Nor was it the less a serious moral imputation because it was conveyed in the tone of banter; and the learned counsel must face the real difficulty in the case, which was whether the libel was privileged on the ground of fair comment or free criticism.

Mr. Bovill said he was quite prepared to discuss that question, and it was, in fact, the question he was prepared to argue. He commenced with this, that the Lord Chief Justice had ruled that the subject was a fit one for public comment, as one of public interest, provided the comments were fair. Then the question became one of actual malice or not. His lordship had put it as a question of right to discuss motive. But there was an unlimited right to discuss a man's acts or motives, provided only that the comments were within the bounds of privilege—that is, were not malicious.

Mr. Justice Crompton observed that the privilege must be to make the imputation complained of, and that must not be assumed from the mere existence of a privilege to discuss the subject. There was no peculiar privilege in newspapers.

Mr. Bovill quite admitted that the privilege was one of public comment or discussion common to all men.

The Lord Chief Justice observed that, assuming a privilege, of course it would become a question of malice; but was there a privilege to make an imputation upon personal character, going beyond mere criticism on the plaintiff's own language?

Mr. Bovill said he should contend for a privilege of comment and construction. And he thought it was laid down by the highest authorities that there was a privilege, and a privilege of the highest character, to discuss the conduct of public men.

The Lord Chief Justice.—Not a privilege peculiar to the press, although, no doubt, it is exercised specially by the press.

Mr. Bovill.—No doubt. It is an important privilege common to the public, based on the great principle upon which privilege rests—viz, the public interest.

Mr. Justice Crompton thought the privilege must rest on a duty in a particular case.

Mr. Bovill said the authorities laid it down that the privilege rested as much on interest as duty. The common case of giving a character to a servant was an instance of privilege resting on the general interests of society, not on duty. There was no legal duty to give a character at all; but it was for the public interests that persons should be able to give characters fairly and freely, and a master might charge his servant with robbery, although he could not prove it, provided he did het say it maliciously. Now, the character and conduct of public men were at least as important to the public as the characters of domestic servants, and one great security for honourable character was the right of free discussion.

The Lord Chief Justice: I think the great security for the conduct of public men is their high sense of honour and duty, and if you can find against the plaintiff, and allow people loosely to impugn their motives, I believe you will do infinitely greater mischief than by allowing less of latitude in the right of public discussion.

Mr. Bovill said he was not arguing that there was an unlimited license of imputation or attack, but only a right of fair discussion. The learned counsel went on to call attention to the authorities. The first he cited was the case of the action by the marine store dealer against the Daily Telegraph—the case of Paris v. Levy (2 Foster and Finlason's Reports, and 31 Law Journal), where the ruling of Lord Chief Justice Erle in favour of the privilege had been upheld by the whole Court, although the article was headed "Encouraging servants to rob their masters." Lord Chief Justice Erle there left it to the jury whether the article was a fair comment on the advertisement issued the plaintiff, and told them that if they thought it was, they might find for the defendant, which they did.

The Court thought that case different from the present, because there it was left to the jury merely as a matter of mere construction of the advertisement. Here the question was whether the writer had not gone beyond the construction of the plaintiff's own announcements, and made suggestions of his own.

Mr. Bovill pointed out that the jury had found here, having nothing before them in support of the writer's suggestions but the plaintiff's own publications, that the writer honestly believed the suggestions to be true.

The Lord Chief Justice: That must be limited. You have no right to libel me merely because you believe your imputations to be true.

Mr. Bovill said he was not arguing that. He assumed here (as the Lord Chief Justice had laid it down) that the occasion was privileged. The question then was whether the words went beyond it, and that, he contended, was for the jury. Whereas, here, it was laid down as law, that if the words conveyed the imputation there was no privilege.

Mr. Justice Crompton said the question was, no doubt, whether the comments were fair or not, but then if they conveyed a libellous charge it was not so.

Mr. Bovill observed that if there were no libel, a privilege could not be required.

The Lord Chief Justice observed that Lord Chief Justice Erle in the marine store dealer's case had left it to the jury whether the advertisement did in effect incite servants to rob their masters; and it must be taken that they thought it did, for they found for the defendant. But here, on the contrary, it was clear that the proposals of the plaintiff were perfectly honest, and that there was nothing intentionally of imposture in them. There was the distinction between the two cases.

Mr. Bovill said the Lord Chief Justice here had not left it to the jury whether the plaintiff's proposals would fairly bear the meaning put upon them by the writer of the article, and it was to be presumed, from their express finding, that they would have so found had it been left to them. The learned counsel went on to cite from Mr. Starkie's treatise on the law of libel in favour of a free right of discussion and exemption of such discussion from liability to action for defamation. "Any evil consequence," said that learned writer, "which might result from defamation is best corrected by exempting largely from liability all cases in which the party has acted bona fide and with a fair intention, whether or not the statements are true. There are many cases in which a party who acts honestly falls into error, and is more consonant with policy to make his criminality depend upon his motive rather than upon the means of proof." Such was the effect the opinion of that eminent writer, and in the case of the Athenæum—"Eastwood v. Holmes" (1, Foster and Finlason's Reports)—the editor had written of some articles sold by the plaintiff and others ("pilgrimes sequa") "that it was a gross attempt at deception and extortion." Mr. Justice Willes laid it down that the article was not libellous, first, because it was matter of general observation; and, next, "because it was prompted by the privilege of fair discussion on a matter of public interest, and was not malicious."

The Court said the ruling might, no doubt, be right upon the first ground.

Mr. Bovill said the learned Judge had not the less laid it down distinctly that the article was privileged on the second ground. And the same view of the law was taken by Lord Chief Justice Erle in the remarkable case of "Turnbull v. Bird" (Foster and Finlayson's Reports), where the imputation published of the plaintiff was that he would be very likely capable of burning public papers with which he was entrusted. In that case Lord Chief Justice Erle laid it down that the publication was privileged, because the law was that a man may publish defamatory matter of another holding a public employment, or in the position of a public man, provided the letter did not go beyond the privilege of the occasion by being made the medium of personal malice, and provided the writer honestly believed the truth of what he wrote, which his Lordship left to the jury.

The Lord Chief Justice observed that there the libel was quite general, and was not so much upon the plaintiff personally as upon all Roman Catholics.

Mr. Bovill said that was not the ground taken by the learned Lord Chief Justice in the case he cited, but he put it distinctly upon the ground taken by the Court of Common Pleas in the marine store dealer's case, "Paris v. Levy." The learned counsel read at some length from the charge of Lord Chief Justice Erle in "Turnbull v. Bird," to the effect he had already cited, especially dwelling upon these passages:—"There is no doubt that the matter complained of is libellous, and would entitle the plaintiff to your verdict, unless the defendant can establish a defence. Now, the law is that defamatory matter is presumed to be malicious unless it is published in the performance of any duty, legal or moral, or in the exercise of any right. The defence on the present occasion comes under the latter head, as a matter necessary to the protection of the public interests or in the exercise of a public right; and the law is that a man may publish defamatory matter of another holding any public employment, or if it is a matter on which the public have any interest, within the limits I shall lay down in accordance with decided cases, 'Every person,' it has been laid down, 'has a right to comment on the acts of a public man, which concern him as a subject of the realm, if he do not make his comments the vehicle of malice or slander.' And I am of opinion that the occasion here would justify the comments, provided they can be brought within the limits laid down by the law in this class of cases. Now, the rule in these cases is that the comment is are justified provided the defendant honestly believed them to be true. Within those limits the law allows the publication. The word malice in law means any corrupt motive, any wrong motive. And if you are of opinion that the defendant in the comments he made was guilty of any misrepresentation of fact, or if he made his comments with any known misstatement of fact which he must or might have known to have existed if he had exercised ordinary care, then he loses his privilege." It was upon that direction said the learned counsel, that the defendant in that case got the verdict. The Court might not agree with the law so laid down, but there it was, and it was contrary to the law as laid down in the present case.

The Lord Chief Justice said in the more recent case of "Paris v. Levy" the law was laid down more in accordance with his own ruling. In that case Chief Justice Erle said:—"In the article in which the tendency to incite servants to dishonesty is imputed, I can see no word against the plaintiff as a private individual or going beyond the handbill, but if Paris put forward a handbill and draws public attention to it, which, in the opinion of the editor, is most dangerous as an incitement to dishonesty, it may be that he will be able to excuse before before a jury the remarks he has made if in their judgment they are well-founded and applicable to it." So that the Chief Justice seemed to lay it down that the question was not whether the writer believed his comments to be fair, but whether the jury thought that he might fairly make them.

Mr. Bovill said no doubt that would always be a question for the jury, but here it had not been left to the jury. And the jury in finding for the plaintiff on the verdict in this case was quite right, and that the finding of the jury, that the writer believed what he wrote to be true, affords no a answer whatever. Now, I think that the case is so clear that we ought not to throw any doubt upon it even by granting a rule to have it discussed.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.—I also think that the case is so clear that we ought not to grant a rule. It is of considerable consequence to bear in mind that the question is not whether the publication is privileged or not, but whether it was or was not a libel. The word "privilege" is often used loosely and in a popular sense, as applied to matters which are not "privileged," properly speaking. But "privilege" means where a person stands in such a relation to the circumstances that he is excused for saying or publishing what would be in a stranger libellous and actionable. In the case in "Bretton v. Fallow" (1, Harlstone and Norman's Reports), where there had been a military inquiry; and so in the case of "Eastwood v. Holmes" (1, Foster and Finlayson's Reports), where there was an action against the Athenæum for publishing that the plaintiff had been party to an imposture. It may be that the learned Judge—Mr. Justice Willes—believed there was no privilege of this kind. That is, where a person stands in such relation to the facts of the particular case that he is "privileged" in law; and therefore proof must be given of actual malice to make him liable. And if it could be shown that the writer stood in that position, then it would be necessary to prove such malice to render him liable. But no authority has been cited to show that the editor of a paper stands in any such peculiar position. He has a general right to comment upon public matters, and the plaintiff was open to such comment, as a person in a public position putting forth public proposals; just as in "Paris v. Levy" it was held that a advertisement had matter of public comment. It is a right common to all the world, but it is a right only to make fair and proper comments. So long as it is proper comment it is no libel, and the question was whether this article did exceed the limits of fair and proper comment on the proposals of the plaintiff. No doubt that question would be for the jury. But from the course which the cause took at the trial it is obvious that the question was not really raised, for it was not disputed, that if the article conveyed the imputations complained of they went beyond the limits of fair comment; and that was the question, therefore, left to the jury, and they, in effect, found that it was. It was indeed found that the writer honestly believed the truth of what he wrote; but I do not think that alters the case so as to make the article no libel. It may sometimes be an element in the case, as in "Turnbull v. Bird," where it seems to have been taken for granted that if there was anything in the Roman Catholic religion which could fairly be supposed to render it likely that the plaintiff should commit the acts suggested, it might fairly be brought forward, and the Lord Chief Justice thereby left it to the jury whether the defendant fairly and honestly believed it to be so. In that case, it was held that the publication was privileged in the strict sense of that term, and therefore did not require evidence of actual malice. If he had so laid down the law, I am sure it would have been wrong. But he did not (as I read the report) so lay down the law. Indeed, he did say that a fair and honest belief, taken by itself, would give a privilege.

SHIPS' MAILS.

MAILS will close at the General Post Office as follows:—

FOR CALLAO.—By the Mohawk, this day, at noon, if not under way.

FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—By the E. C. Felter, this day, at noon.

FOR MELBOURNE.—By the City of Melbourne (s.), this day, at 3.30 p.m.

FOR BRISBANE.—By the Telegraph (s.), this day, at 4.30 p.m.

FOR GRAFTON.—By the Agnes Irving (s.), this day, at 5.30 p.m.

FOR LONDON.—By the Strathdon, on Wednesday, at noon.

CUSTOM HOUSE.—Entered outwards, June 29: Telegraph (s.), 700 tons, Captain O'Reilly, for Brisbane; Emily, schooner, 46 tons, Captain Griffiths, for Melbourne; Charlotte Andrews, barque, Captain Jenkins, for Otago; Native Lass, schooner, 106 tons, Captain M'Leod, for South Sea Islands; City of Sydney, brig, 88 tons, Captain Webster, for Geelong; Rita, brig, 198 tons, Captain Souter, for Nelson, via Newcastle.

The Louis and Miriam, from Wellington, has had strong S. E. winds for the last three days.

There will be no steamer leaving the H. R. N. S. N. Co.'s Wharf, to or from Clarence Town this week.

The Ellen, from Twofold Bay, brings up 20 sides bacon, 43 cheeses, 4 kegs butter, 3 tons butter, 50 bags bran. She reports the brig Highlander as having put into the Bay on the 24th, bound to Hobart Town. The Gipsy was also there on the 26th.

The schooner Fox arrived off the Clarence Heads on Monday, 22nd instant, but was unable to cross the bar, owing to adverse winds, up to the time of the Agnes Irving leaving. The schooners Margaret and Elizabeth, Otago, Roderick Dhu, and ketch Elfin were lying in Port Stephens, weatherbound, on 29th instant.

The Agnes Irving (s.) left Grafton on Friday, 26th, and at 5.45 a.m. crossed the Bar same day at 1.30 p.m. She experienced heavy south-west winds to Port Macquarie, and with strong south-east gales to Port Stephens, where she put in on Saturday at 8 p.m., and left on Monday at 4.30 a.m., with light southerly winds. The Agnes Irving brings as cargo 2050 bags maize, 30 casks tallow, 100 hides, 5 boxes eggs, 3 coops poultry, 2 horses, and sundries.

The Yarra Yarra (s.) arrived at Brisbane at 7 a.m. on the 29th, and the James Paterson had put back to that port on the same date, having been compelled to bear up when within 200 miles of Sydney, owing to the terrific gales encountered.

The Naval Brigade commenced big gun exercise yesterday morning, at Port Macquarie. Cutlass drill takes place at Hyde Park Barracks, on Wednesday night.

OCEAN STEAMERS BETWEEN PANAMA AND SAN FRANCISCO.—The greatest activity seems to prevail at the present time in the maritime affairs of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. Three steamers of the same size, speed, and accommodation for passengers as the Constitution are now building on the Atlantic side, under the appropriate names of the Golden City, Sacramento, and Vancouver. The two former have been already launched, and as they are nearly completed, will soon take their places in the line from San Francisco to Panama. The Vancouver is also in course of construction and will be added to this fleet early in the coming year. The Company are also moving very briskly in the building of two smaller steamers, and which are now nearly completed. With these increased facilities, it is contemplated to develop the trade between this port and New York to its fullest extent. We understand that in certain classes of freight a special reduction will be made, so that shippers will be further induced to select the Isthmus route and avoid the long delay via Cape Horn. We cannot but congratulate the whole North Pacific coast upon this important increase in the line of steamers. The vessels building by the Company are of mammoth proportions, thoroughly appointed and furnished, and will prove equal to the demand for some time to come. The policy in the Isthmus route, it is said, will be to keep pace with our rapid progress as a State and to satisfy the public by affording the most ample and safe travelling and freighting facilities.—Alta California, May 2nd.

LIST OF VESSELS CAPTURED BY THE ALABAMA.—The following is a list of ships captured by the Alabama to February 27:—Ocmulgee, Starlight (steamer), Ocean Rover, Alert, Weathergage, Alta Maha, Benjamin Tucker, Corsair, Virginia, Elisha Dunbar, Emily Farnham (released), Brilliant, Wave Crest, Dunkirk, Tonawanda (released), Manchester, Lamplighter, Lafayette, Grimshaw, Laurette, Castine (released); Levy Starbrick, Thomas B. Wales, Parker Cook, Alfred Chas. Wolf, Ariel (released), Golden Eagle, Palmetto, Olive Jane, Union (released), Washington released on giving bond for 50,000 dollars), Castlemaine, Hatteras (man-of-war), and John A. Parks. Captain Purchase, of the barque William Edward, of Liverpool, which arrived at Greenock last week from Bombay, reports that on Sunday, March 1, at 6 a.m., he saw a steam vessel of great length, rigged as a three-masted schooner, with topsails, topgallantsail, and mizzen, with a low funnel, and having the Confederate flag flying, but not under steam, run down to a large ship which was about two miles to leeward of the William Edward. When the steamer got close to the ship, the latter clewed all sails up except her topsails, and hove to. The steamer's boat went alongside of her, and at 8 a.m. left the ship, which made all sail on her course. When the boat reached the steamer, the latter made sail after the William Edward. At noon she was three miles astern, both vessels being then in latitude 30 N., longitude 36.35 W. At 4 p.m. the steamer came in with the William Edward, and hoisted the American ensign which Captain Purchase answered with the British. She was asked by signals the name of the barque, and whence and where she was bound, all of which were answered. Captain Purchase asked the steamer's name, and the longitude, and was answered (modo Scottice) by the inquiry, "Have you seen any American vessels?" Captain Purchase, who had spoken one a few days previously, answered in the affirmative. The steamer then asked if the American vessel was a man-of-war, and Captain Purchase replied that she was not. The steamer then gave the longitude, 37.38 W., and took in her squaresails, studdingsails, and mizen. Captain Purchase asked her name, and she hoisted "Ticonderoga," the name of a Federal man-of-war. The steamer then wore to the S.W., and hoisted the Confederate ensign and "Alabama." Captain Purchase wished Captain Semmes a good voyage, and was answered, "Thank him for me." The Alabama then dipped her ensign three times, stood away to S.W., and was soon out of sight.—Mitchell's Steam Register, March 27.

TUESDAY, JUNE 30, 1863.

THE case of CAMPBELL v. SPOTTISWOODE has been finally decided in favour of the plaintiff. This cause will stand among the landmarks of law, and will be often appealed to in similar questions unless the Legislature should interpose and render it inapplicable. The plaintiff, as our readers are aware, is the editor and part proprietor of the British Ensign—a paper which represents strong party views both in politics and religion. Dr. CAMPBELL is celebrated for the vigour of his writings, and among a large portion of the British community is distinguished as a somewhat acrimonous representative of much debated opinions. He is, however, known in religious circles as a strenuous advocate of Christian missions, and he has performed in the course of his life much service in promoting them. To such a man the conversion of China to the Christian faith would be an object naturally enchanting. Those who know him best will be the last to suspect that mere sordid motives influence his writings, or that he does not himself participate in that enthusiasm which he has endeavoured to inspire. Among the schemes for promoting this object, he proposed that certain numbers of his paper should be devoted to the subject. This scheme, supported by men like Lord SHAFTESBURY, can be hardly regarded as the device of a mere charlatan to promote the circulation of a newspaper. To stimulate this project many large subscriptions were made for hundreds or thousands of copies. These were referred to by Dr. CAMPBELL to prove the success, as well as by exciting imitation to promote the extension of his scheme.

To persons such as usually write in the Saturday Review it is probable Christian missions would appear a mere absurdity, and missions to China peculiarly ridiculous. When we find that a man of the eminent goodness of SYDNEY SMITH could commit to paper the statements which still pass under his name in reference to Indian missions and to men whose fame is universal among all scientific as well as ecclesiastical bodies—we mean such men as Dr. CAREY and Dr. MARSHMAN—it is not to be imagined that young writers, full of heathen classics and contempt for all enthusiasms, should treat with much ceremony a person of the character and connections of Dr. CAMPBELL. Here, however, they exercised a discretion to which they were entitled. They had a right to denounce the mission he proposed as absurd, and his peculiar projects as ridiculous. But they went beyond this. They intimated to the public that these subscriptions for papers, some of which were mentioned under the names of the subscribers, were mere inventions of the "old soldier," to lead others to subscribe in reality—that they were, in short, a part of a gross imposture. Dr. CAMPBELL offered to prove the truth of the notices, and to submit his books to the examination of these critics. This, however, was not their game, and, after some skirmishing, the question was finally submitted to a court of law.

The trial was one of very great interest, in consequence of a question being raised hitherto unheard of—namely, that the belief of a writer might be ascertained by a jury, not upon any evidence produced by him to prove his belief, but by their own impression of probabilities; and, secondly, that this impression, if put into the form of an opinion in arriving at a verdict, should reverse the verdict itself, or that it should be entered up as a verdict for the defendant. So that if a man without any reasonable ground, or merely for the purpose of rounding a sentence, chooses to give expression to the belief that any other man has committed some odious crime, or been guilty of a series of infamous offences, a jury might form their own notion of the capacity of his credulousness, and virtually acquit him of all consequences. Mr. BOVILL, an eminent counsel, put this question so strongly to the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE that he permitted an opinion to be taken of the jury, and the question was raised in a substantive form before the Court of Queen's Bench. Here the notion was met by the most resolute resistance. All the Judges concurred in opinion, not that the point should be submitted to argument, but, as Mr. Justice MELLOR put it, "that they ought to refuse a rule even to have the question discussed."

The CHIEF JUSTICE, in giving his judgment, went into the question of privilege as relating to editors of newspapers, and proved that they are not recognisable as possessing any other privilege than those which belong to all the subjects of the QUEEN. Every man, whatever be his conditions, has a right to express his opinions with respect to the conduct of other men. But "you have no right," says the JUDGE, "to impute to a man whose conduct you assail, and who may be fairly open to your attacks, base, sordid, and dishonest motives, unless there is so much ground for the imputation that a jury shall think, not only that you had a honest belief in the truth of your statements, but that your belief is not without foundation." Here surely is latitude enough. A jury will not expect of a defendant such a rigorous statement of the foundation of his opinions as may leave no possible shade of doubt, but they will require some broad evidence as that he has such a foundation. The CHIEF JUSTICE observes:—"By privilege I understand some particular immunity attaching to a particular class, or to persons in a particular position or having a particular function—a privilege derived from the nature of that position or function, and in the nature of a private or peculiar right, as opposed to the rights possessed by the community at large. That is the nature of what the law deems a privilege, and no doubt when that really exists there is an exemption from legal liability in the absence of malice; that is to say, that, whereas in other cases of libel it is not necessary to prove actual malice, in these cases of privilege it is necessary. But there is no such privilege here. It is not set up as the privilege of any particular person, or any particular class, or any particular position. It is a right set up for all persons in the nation to discuss public matters, and in so doing to defame individuals, provided it is not done maliciously; but no one can have a right on such a ground to go beyond the right of fair comment or discussion, and to publish what is defamatory merely because he believes it to be true."

The law in the colonies with respect to libels differs somewhat from that of England. There the defendant has only to show that the statements are true, and this plea is sufficient to meet a civil action; but in this colony, besides showing the truth, it must be shown that the publication of such statements or comments is for the public good; and if this fails in the opinion of a jury, the defence fails. The peculiar circumstances of the colonies probably give rise to this state of the law. One of our Judges at least has expressed strong sympathy with the law of England, but we confess that we are not yet prepared to admit its adoption, because it is well known that there are in this community persons who would raise large revenues, not only by "showing up" others, but by threatening to "show up" whoever might be sufficiently rich or sufficiently sensitive to pay for exemption. If this difficulty could be overcome, we might adopt the English law. In all communities of recent origin there are large numbers of persons whose previous history would not bear a microscope, and whose past and probably corrected failings it is for the public benefit should be covered with oblivion. In America unlimited license of newspapers causes continual resort to violence and bloodshed. Where murder is not preferred, the pistol is the censor of the Press—too often controlled by the most reckless and worthless of the community.

Newspaper proprietors are, from the nature of their calling, exposed to many difficulties, and these are so well understood by the public, that there is no danger that the verdicts of juries will cramp the fair action of the Press. But it is a monstrous idea that because a man by accident comes into the possession of a few types and the title of a newspaper, he should be enabled to follow with impunity a scheme which will base his calculation of success chiefly upon the love of scandal. The affairs of public life and public conduct are the proper limit, and it is a large one for the exercise of the liberty of unlicensed, but not irresponsible, printing.

THERE was a Municipalities Bill before Parliament last session, but it was coached along very lazily, and ultimately allowed to lapse. The early period at which it has been re-introduced this session is to be taken, we presume, as an indication that this session the Government really mean to pass it. It is highly expedient that there should be no further delay. The development of the existing municipalities has revealed several defects in the Act, besides pointing out improvements that may be made; and the want of an amended Act is somewhat retarding both the operations of existing municipalities and the multiplication of fresh ones. Nor, indeed, can the Legislature well be employed on any more useful task than that of perfecting a municipal system, which shall be adapted to the present condition of the colony, and calculated to promote its advancement. The municipal system is no speculative theory which is now on its trial for the first time. It is interwoven with the growth of modern civilization, and its political importance is one of the lessons of history. Socialisms are often no doubt troublesome, narrow, wayward, and even obstructive; but out of their conflict with centralisation have issued representative institutions and constitutional liberty.

Inheriting, as we do, these results, we do not need municipal institutions for the purpose of securing them, yet local government is not without its value as a means of preserving the spirit of liberty—a spirit which is quite as capable of degeneracy as it is of purification. The act of self-government is only learned by practice, and the necessary forms and conditions of government are only generally appreciated on a large scale, when the people are familiarised with their application in local administrations. The spirit of localism is not always opposed to centralization; for, in proportion as the people learn to comprehend the true functions of government and the miseries of anarchy, they are as ready to acquiesce in a vigorous exertion of legitimate authority as they are prompt to resent illegitimate usurpation.

The political advantages of the municipal system, however, are not the special reasons for which we adopt it. Whatever their value, they are incidental. It is to promote material civilisation—to get roads and bridges, public conveniences, and sanitary arrangements—that we multiply corporations. They bring two advantages:—first, they increase the revenue available for public works by introducing the direct taxation of fixed property; and secondly, they bring local knowledge and interest to bear upon the expenditure of the money. Experience shows that money is generally laid out to more advantage when it is spent under the direct supervision of the tax-payers. There are instances, of course, to be found where there has been local jobbery, where councillors have spent the rates mainly to improve their own properties. These instances should teach ratepayers to be careful whom they elect, and to place in office only men of probity and principle. But there are also plenty of instances of jobbery in the distribution of money by the central authority, where political services or importunity regulate the amount. The jobbery of centralisation is at least quite equal to the jobbery of localism, and has the further disadvantage of being less easily curable.

Several of the municipalities already established in the colony have given rise to complaints and dissatisfaction, and some have been in a chronic condition of strife from their very birth. But after making all allowances for for these failures—due mostly to the selection of improper persons as officers—the system, so far as it has gone, has yielded a decided balance of advantage. We have no option but to extend it, and to strive to perfect it.

Before, however, the system can be permanently established as a perfect success, there is one important improvement which it will be necessary to introduce, and that is, that the voting power in municipalities should, within certain limits, be graduated in proportion to the burden of taxation. Until this is done violence will be offered to the sense of equity, and no institution which is at issue with right and justice can be acquiesced in as satisfactory. In many cases complaints have been made that when proposals are started to form a municipality, a great or a covert opposition is experienced from the large holders of property; that is, from those who ought to take the lead in improvements, and who have most to gain from the advancement of their district. But the opposition has arisen not from a dislike to local and representative institutions, but from dissatisfaction with the present construction, and therefore with the mode of operation of those institutions. The corruptions of the best things are said to be the worst, and an inequitable representative system may be worse than no representation at all. If those who bore the chief burden of local taxation had a proportionate voice in the spending of the money, there would be less complaint. A municipality does not deal with the great questions that often occupy the attention of a central executive. It has nothing to do with life and liberty. It deals with none of the topics that touch upon general human rights. Its operations are simply confined to certain local improvements, the funds for which are drawn from local sources. Its one great function is taxation, and the distribution of the proceeds. The very essence of local self-government is, that those who find the funds should spend them—that there should be no taxation without representation. But this fundamental maxim is violated whenever the preponderance of the spending power is lodged elsewhere than where the preponderance of the burden also lies.

The bill, as introduced by the Government, does not include the necessary provision for equitably adjusting the relative rights of ratepayers—perhaps from oversight, or timidity. But the passing of this bill affords a fair opportunity for incorporating such a provision, and if the Government hesitates to propose it, we hope that some private member will, and that the House will deal calmly and fairly with it, so as to place our local institutions at once on a sound and satisfactory basis.

Marcuss' coach, which left here for Forbes yesterday morning, was stopped in the afternoon, on the road between the Weddin Inn and Bogolong, by two armed men, who ordered the passengers, five or six in number, to deliver up their money. No resistance was offered. One of the men is stated to be Johnny Gilbert.

A storekeeper's assistant was stopped while crossing the Main Creek, about half a mile from the town, about noon to-day by two armed men, well mounted. He was ordered to get off his horse and deliver up his cash.

A storekeeper named Emanuel was stopped to-day on the road into this town, at about eight miles from Wombat, by armed men, and was obliged to give up his money, watch, and chain. Two diggers were also plundered this morning.

The Escort takes 489 ounces.

Monday, 7 p.m.

The Hannah More is still in quarantine.

The James Paterson (s.), from Rockhampton, bound to Sydney, put in here short of coals. When within 200 miles of Sydney she encountered a terrific gale, and fuel becoming short was compelled to run back to Brisbane under sail.

The Urara (s.), left for Sydney to-day.

Business slack; little doing.

MELBOURNE.

Monday, 8 p.m.

Writs have been issued for the new Ministerial elections.

The particulars of kidnapping in the Pacific Islands, received via Sydney, caused great indignation. Steps are being taken to memorialise the Home Government through his Excellency the Governor, expressive of the feeling here on the subject.

Two sections of the Opposition are said to have organised operations for the remainder of the session.

The office of Postmaster-General has been offered to Mr. M'Mahon.

Trade perfectly stagnant. Nothing doing.

The Formosa, from Mauritius, brings 7000 bags sugar. She reports that information had been received from Madagascar of a revolution. The rebels in large number had surrounded the palace, killed the king and seventeen officers of state. The American Consul was also murdered, and the English and French Consuls escaped with great difficulty.

Arrived.—Formosa, from Mauritius; Express, from Liverpool; Chalmers, from London; Briton's Queen, from Sydney; Maasluis, from Rotterdam.

Sailed.—Wonga Wonga (s.), from Sydney.

The Maasluis, from Rotterdam, brings a cargo consisting of 2500 cases geneva, 1100 packages candles, 2600 bags oats, 600 demijohns barley.

LAW.

SUPREME COURT.—MONDAY.

SPECIAL SITTINGS AT NISI PRIUS.
BEFORE the Chief Justice and a common jury of twelve.

FINES.

Fines of £2 each were imposed for non-attendance upon the following jurors, viz.:—Robert Harris, householder, Forbes-street, Sydney; William Harmer, builder, Bay-street, Sydney; and Robert Hawkins, mason, Burrapore-street, Sydney.

THOMPSON AND WIFE V. THE COMMISSIONER FOR RAILWAYS.

This was an action by James Thompson and Euphemia, his wife, to recover damages for injuries said to have been sustained by the latter through the negligence of the employes on the Southern Railway, namely, by the train being set in motion when Mrs. Thompson was descending from a carriage at the Haslam Creek Station, through which, being cast with violence on the rails, she had a leg broken and sustained other severe injuries. Damages were laid at £3000. The defendant pleaded the general issue, not guilty.

Mr. Isaacs and Mr. Stephen appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Darvall, Q.C., and Mr. Owen for the defendant.

Thompson was a wheelwright, resident at Bankstown. His wife was, as she stated, about forty years of age and the mother of a large family; with one of these, a boy of twelve, who had a dislocated arm, she had been to Parramatta for surgical assistance, on the 19th December last, and it was on her return that she received the injury which formed the subject matter of the present action. The place at which the Thompsons lived was three miles from the Haslam Creek station. It was from that station that Mrs. Thompson took her passage to Parramatta per rail with a return ticket, and it was there on her return that the accident took place. Haslam Creek is a station at which the trains do not stop as a matter of course—only when there are passengers to be taken up or set down. On this occasion the signal was up for a stoppage. The train, however, did not actually stop. There was only a slackening of speed until it was diminished to little more than mere motion—a progress at the rate of about a quarter of a mile per hour. Two passengers got up, however, and the station-master having let them in and others out, came hastily along the platform and opened the door to let out Mrs. Thompson and her child. He had opened the door and lifted the boy on to the platform, but just as Mrs. Thompson was about to follow the speed of the train was increased. She, however followed her child, but, in springing to the platform, her foot caught in some way, owing to this increased speed, and she was precipitated, with violence, on to the platform. By this fall her right leg was badly fractured. She was removed to her home, and attended by Dr. Smith, of Liverpool. Her case, however, became so serious that another professional man—Dr. Pringle—had to be called in. It was decided by these gentlemen that one of the small bones of the leg—"the astragalus"—must be wholly removed. This operation was performed by Dr. Pringle. Although this had been done admittedly with great skill, Mrs. Thompson was still unable to walk without support, and would be at least ten months more before she recovered, with any freedom, even the imperfect use of her limb. The perfect use of it she would never recover. Besides this injury, present and prospective, evidence was given as to the expenses which had been incurred for medical attendance. Dr. Pringle, although, besides performing the operation, he had paid nine visits, had charged but £28. Mr. Smith had not sent in a bill, but he had paid sixty visits, and he estimated the value of his services at three guineas per visit, at least, having to ride from Liverpool to Bankstown—a distance of eight miles—and back. Damages were further claimed by reason of Mrs. Thompson having been incapacitated for the performance of her ordinary household duties. Mrs. Thompson and her son had walked from her residence to the station in the morning, and purposed to have walked back in the evening. It was contended that, when she saw that she could not spring out with safety, she ought to have remained where she was, leaving her boy to walk home which, at his age, and after having walked to the station in the morning, he would have been able to do. In other words, that Mrs. Thompson had, by her carelessness in leaping when the train was in motion, been contributory to her own injury, and consequently that the plaintiffs were not entitled to a verdict. On the other hand, it was contended that Mrs. Thompson had naturally and properly followed her sick child, and that in increasing the speed of the train when passengers were descending, the railway officials were guilty of gross negligence. According to the evidence the whole thing was very hurried. The passengers who got in had to be assisted, or they would not have been able to second, and the motion when Mrs. Thompson was getting out had become so increased that no descent, except by a young and active man, could be made without risk.

No evidence was gone into for the defence. It was admitted that, if the plaintiffs were entitled to recover at all, a fair and liberal amount of compensation ought to be awarded to them; but it was contended that if Mrs. Thompson had been in any way,—even but partly,—contributory to her own injury, the railway officials were not legally responsible in this form of action, and a verdict ought be found for the defendant. It was admitted that the train ought to have been stopped, but it was contended that this not having been done, Mrs. Thompson ought to have gone on, and have proceeded against the Railway authorities for damages thereby incurred, including the cost of her return by a hired vehicle.

The Chief Justice, in summing-up, stated that the Commissioner for Railways had done no more than his duty in obtaining the verdict of a jury upon this case, however it might be determined, rather than by deciding it upon his own responsibility. The case, however, must be decided upon its merits, irrespective of the position of the parties. The first question was whether or not there had been gross negligence in not actually stopping the train; and that for such a length of time as would enable the passengers to get in or out with safety. It was for the jury, his Honor held, to say whether or not the railway officials had been guilty of any want of ordinary care or skill. If there had been no such want the defendant would be entitled to a verdict; but if there had, the plaintiffs must recover, unless the jury should hold, at the same time, that the accident which had resulted could have been avoided by Mrs. Thompson by the exercise of ordinary caution on her part. But the want of ordinary caution on her part would not relieve the defendants, unless by the exercise of this ordinary caution the accident could have been wholly avoided. If the jury came to the question of damages, they must award such an amount as upon a consideration of all the circumstances of the case they might deem sufficient. They must take into account the pain she had suffered, the injury she had sustained, the expense—fairly estimated—which had been incurred.

The jury, after having retired for about half-an-hour, found a verdict for the plaintiff—damages £1000. They expressed their opinion that the injury was entirely the result of negligence on the part of the railway officials.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

MONDAY, 29TH JUNE.
BEFORE Mr. Justice Milford.

Henry Wheeler, a lad aged about 16 years, was arraigned on three several charges of forgery. A second count in each indictment charged the prisoner with feloniously uttering the forgeries upon which he had sought to obtain money. The forgeries were for £7 15s., £6 10s., and £12 15s.

The prisoner (who stated that his real name was Henry Francis Bergett) pleaded guilty in each case, to the charge of uttering. He handed in a statement that he had fallen into bad company and had been thereby led astray. He begged the Judge to pass upon him as light a sentence as the law would allow.

The Attorney General prayed for sentence.

His Honor, having looked at the depositions, sentenced the prisoner (who showed no great compunction at his disgraceful position) to be confined in her Majesty's gaol at Darlinghurst, for three years, and to be kept to hard labour. The same sentence was passed upon the prisoner in respect to the two other charges—term of sentences to commence from the same day.

BIGAMY.

John Griffin was indicted for bigamy, for that he, having married Bridget Hurley, at Gosford, in April, 1853, did, afterwards, at Hartley, on the 11th of November, 1861, re-marry one Margaret Beal—his wife Bridget Hurley being still alive.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty, and was undefended.

Michael O'Leary proved that he was present at the marriage. The first wife was living; he saw her a few days ago.

The prisoner attempted to cross-examine the witness, but broke out into long rambling statements, which were, so peculiarly idiomatic as to be utterly unintelligible to the Court and jury.

James Phelan, Roman Catholic priest at Hartley proved the solemnisation of the marriage of the prisoner and Margaret Beal. The woman Beal was a widow at the time that Griffin married her. Before this marriage of Griffin, Griffin had informed him that he was a widower.

Margaret Beal deposed that she had married the prisoner in November, 1861. She had lived with him for thirteen months, and had only ceased to live with him when the clergyman informed her that the previous wife was living. The priest had advised her to live with him no longer.

The prisoner asked her if he had not made over a farm to her when they were separated?

The witness said that he had.

The Rev. Mr. Phelan, being recalled by the Judge, stated that he had known Griffin for four years previous to his marriage with Margaret Beal. When he knew him first he was living with a woman who passed as his wife. They left the district, and he subsequently returned to the district alone. The prisoner distinctly informed witness that his wife was dead, but some time after the marriage of Griffin to Beal, a clergyman informed witness that the first wife was living.

The prisoner said that he had no witnesses to call.

The Judge summed up. The question was, whether the first marriage was a valid marriage, and if so, whether the first wife was living at the time of the second marriage. O'Leary deposed that he saw her on the 31st of last month, and unless there was reason shown for disbelieving him his testimony was entitled to consideration from the jury. The first wife might have been produced, and identified no doubt. It would have strengthened the evidence for the prosecution had that been done, but it was not, perhaps, necessary to adopt that course. Bridget Griffin would not have been a competent witness.

Michael O'Leary being recalled, stated that he had seen Bridget Griffin at Lake Macquarie, on the 31st of May last. He had had no quarrel with the prisoner.

The jury, without leaving the box, returned a verdict of not guilty.

ASSAULT AND ROBBERY.

David White was indicted for violently assaulting and robbing one John Brees, at Sydney, on the 19th of June, 1863.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The Attorney-General conducted the case for the Crown. The counsel for the prisoner was Mr. Windeyer. Attorney for the prisoner Mr. Edward Cory.

The Attorney-General stated the case to the jury.

John Brees, being sworn, deposed: I am an ironmonger, living at Newtown. I know the prisoner. I saw him in an oyster saloon in King-street, on the 19th of June. I met him there about 7 o'clock, and from there I went with him to the Victoria Theatre. The person who kept the saloon was named Austin. I was in the prisoner's company the whole of the evening. I stopped in the theatre till about twelve o'clock. We went out in the course of the night, and went into several public-houses. We finally went down George-street. I said "Where are you going to down here?" He said he was only just going up to the turning of Wynyard-square. I had some doubts about him then, and put my hand in my pocket, and found them all safe. I put them up again. It was in a public-house in King-street that I did this. Going down George-street I felt the prisoner's arm put round my neck and my notes and watch taken out of my pocket. The prisoner nearly throttled me as he did this, and I fell when he let me go. I saw no one else near me at the time. He was walking arm in arm with me when he suddenly did this. I had called for about six glasses of ale that evening, but had not drunk it all. When I came to myself my eyes were nearly crushed out of my head, and the blood was running out of my mouth. I did not see the prisoner when I came to myself. I saw him in custody the next morning. I have not seen my money or my watch since. When I saw the prisoner next morning I told the sergeant that he was the man that was in my company. The prisoner admitted that he had been in my company, but said he had been stopped and struck up too, and robbed of his money and his watch. He said, "I know the b—— wretches who did it, and if you let me out I will show them to you."

Cross-examined by Mr. Windeyer: I am under the impression that I was only in King and Market streets that night. I went out of the theatre to drink about twice during the performances. I was not shouting for nobblers all round that night. I might have spent about twenty shillings that day, but not in drink. After leaving the theatre we—the prisoner and I—went to several public-houses. I had £65 in notes in my pocket that night. These were stolen from me. I have been a resident in Newtown for the last year and a half. I was sober, not drunk at all. I had had something to drink. I was in the oyster shop at about seven o'clock. Before that I had been in several different houses of business. I had not been drinking before I went to Austin's. I did not drink brandy at the houses to which I went with the prisoner. I "shouted" for others. I had this money in my pocket, having sold off my stock, and being about to leave the country. I felt the prisoner withdraw his arm, and, as he did so, I felt an arm put round my throat. I felt the arm go round my back as he withdrew his. I deny that I was very drunk that night. I passed that night in the watch-house. The policeman who found me said I had better come with him to the watch-house. I told him I had been robbed. There was a warrant out against me about an order for the maintenance of an illegitimate child.

By a juror: Where did you stop after you were sold off, and before this robbery?

Witness: At my sister's at Stanmore.

By the juror: Had you not been sleeping at the oyster shop?

Witness: I stopped there one night.

Juror: Your Honor, he is telling falsehoods. He was staying at the oyster shop; my son saw him there. He was seen by me going into the theatre that night with a lot of women. He owes me £5; and I sent to him at the oyster shop for it. I can bring witnesses to prove that he is a telling untruths.

Judge: You can give evidence if you desire to do so.

Another Juror: Did you spend any of your money with those women?

Witness: I did not.

Juror: You took your money several times out of your pocket that night. What did you do that for?

Witness: To see if it was safe.

Several other jurors cross-examined the witness as to his sobriety, and apparently with a view to test his veracity.

James Thompson, constable in the Sydney Police Force, deposed that he saw the witness John Brees sitting in George-street, on the 19th of June, at two o'clock in the morning. His hat was bruised. He went with witness to the watch-house. He walked with witness to the watch-house. He was not drunk, but might have had some drink. Witness would not have taken him into custody. He asked leave to stop at the station-house.

Patrick Lyons, being sworn, deposed: I am a detective constable in the Sydney police force; I arrested the prisoner on the charge of the assault and robbery of John Brees, on the 20th of June. He said he had himself been choked and robbed. He commenced crying that he had been choked and robbed. He was violent when he came to the watchhouse. He said to the prosecutor, "I know you have, and I will shew the b—— wretches up." He continued swearing and using bad language, so that I found it necessary to put him into a cell. He was sober, but appeared excited as if he had been drinking. The prosecutor appeared to be steady, but had evidently been drinking. The man was kept at the station-house to be a witness for the Crown as to the case of robbery he had reported.

John Sutton, detective of the Sydney police force, being sworn, deposed that he had asked the prisoner if he had been in company with a man named Brees on the night previous? He said yes. Witness told him that he was charged with robbing him, and arrested him. He said he had been robbed himself. Prisoner was taken by witness to the watchhouse, and when searched there several articles were found upon him. All the money witness found on the prisoner was not more than nine and sixpence.

Charles Austen, being sworn, deposed that he kept an oyster shop in Market-street. The witness Brees was at his house on the Tuesday and Wednesday night before the robbery. He was there on Thursday night when Mr. White came in. He shook hands with White as he came in, and, at witness' suggestion, put a revolver and its case into his pocket. Witness saw no notes with Mr. Brees that night. Witness has known David White thirteen years and three days. Witness went to the bank at the request of prosecutor and cashed a £50 note. Witness got one pound notes for that note, gave them to him, and counted them down to him.

By Mr. Windeyer: When they (the prisoner and prosecutor) came back to witness' house the last time, they were both muddled. They had had enough, and witness refused to serve them. When Brees and the prisoner came back the first time they had two young women with them. Witness refused to serve them.

By a juror: When White came in Brees got up at once and called him by name and shook him by the hand. He was agreeable to go anywhere with him.

Robert Horn, publican, deposed to the fact that the prisoner and prosecutor were drinking together on the night mentioned in the charge. They were drinking with males and females. They were both drunk. There were three men and five women, whom the prosecutor was treating. Two women and others went out with them when witness turned them out shortly before twelve o'clock.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

Mr. Windeyer addressed the jury for the defence, contending that the prosecutor having evidently been in a state of semi-intoxication during the whole of the evening in question, his evidence as against the prisoner was not to be depended on. As the testimony of the prosecutor was the only evidence against the prisoner, and as this testimony was not to be depended on, they ought to acquit the prisoner. In addition to this, there was the fact that prosecutor had sold off all his property, and had all the money he possessed in the world on his person at the time he was robbed; and that as he was anxious to get out of the colony in order to save himself from paying for a child that was not his own, there was every reason to believe that he had himself made away with the money and then trumped up this charge of robbery in order to make persons believe that he was possessed of no property whatever.

The Attorney-General replied, contending that the prosecutor was fully aware of what he was doing, although he might possibly have taken more liquor than he ought to have taken. Neither could there be any doubt that the prosecutor was going about wasting his substance perhaps to the loss of his creditors, but still that was no reason why he should be garotted and robbed. He then reviewed the evidence, showing that the prosecutor's testimony was unshaken throughout, and was in all respects borne out by the admission of prisoner himself.

His Honor summed up, and the jury retired. After an absence of rather more than three-quarters of an hour, the jury returned with a verdict of not guilty.

The Court then rose.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

MONDAY.
BEFORE the Police Magistrate, with Messrs. Cullen, M. M. Cohen, Alexander, S. Cohen, Peden, Lyons, Murphy, and Hogg.

Francesco Duvenal was summarily convicted of having stolen a pair of trousers, valued at 14s. 6d., the property of Daniel Holborrow, of George-street, draper, and was sentenced to be imprisoned fourteen days.

Peter Gallagher, a well known thief, was convicted, on his own confession, of having stolen four inkstands, of the value of 13s., the property of Charles T. Sandon, of George-street, stationer, and was sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour three calendar months.

William Ryan, nineteen, was convicted of having stolen one pewter half-pint ale measure, valued at 2s. 6d., the property of James Hogg, of Woolloomooloo, publican. The prisoner was on Friday night at Hogg's public-house; on Saturday morning the measure was missed; on Saturday evening constable Goldrick saw something which excited his suspicion at a stall in Campbell-street market, and on making inquiry found that Ryan had sold it to the stallholder for 3d., and two or three penny worth of lollies, a half-pint measure inscribed with the name of James Hogg; Goldrick thought the transaction suspicious, and took both Ryan and the stallholder into custody—the one on suspicion of having stolen, and the other, for having with a guilty knowledge received the measure. Ryan was sentenced to pay a penalty of 20s., or be imprisoned seven days, and the stall-holder was discharged.

Catherine Panamore, found guilty of having on the 1st instant stolen a gown, the property of Bridget M'Loren, was sentenced to pay a penalty of 7s. 6d., or to be imprisoned seven days.

Three vagrant women, apprehended for disorderly conduct, being more or less under the influence of drink, were sentenced to be imprisoned one month. Seven other persons (five females and two males) were fined—some 10s., and others 20s., on conviction of either riotous conduct or obscene language while more or less intoxicated. Six persons charged with drunkenness alone were discharged.

The summons paper consisted of a rather long list of cases, the greater part of which were either struck out for want of prosecution or dismissed for want of merit. Robert Johnson appeared in answer to a summons granted to Mary, his wife, a person of respectable appearance and demeanour, carrying an infant in her arms, and accompanied by three little children of from about two to six years of age, who, although very lightly clad, and having neither shoe nor sock to their feet, were evidently not neglected by their mother, who complained that he had deserted her, leaving her without the means of supporting the family, although by reason of his trade as a tin-plate worker he is well able to support her and them. She stated in her evidence that if her husband thought proper he could earn £3 per week, but whatever he does earn he makes away with, very seldom returning home in a state of sobriety. On cross-examination by her husband, Mrs. Johnson said that on last Monday he gave her 7s., and the week before he gave her 4s. Their worships then said that upon her own showing her husband has not deserted her; they would, however, postpone the case, to give an opportunity for an amicable arrangement.—Two or three other cases were postponed by consent of the parties.—Two wages cases were heard, in which orders were made for the amounts claimed; and in three assault cases, the defendants were found guilty, and sentenced to pay penalties of 1s., 5s., and 10s. respectively.

WATER POLICE COURT.

MONDAY.
BEFORE the Water Police Magistrate, with Mr. J. Williams, and Mr. R. Ronald.

John Jasper, a seaman belonging to the City of Bristol, convicted of wilful disobedience of lawful commands, was sentenced to seven days' hard labour in gaol.

John Brown, a seaman, was charged with wilfully destroying a door and chair, the property of Elizabeth Beck, of the Volunteer Hotel, Circular Quay. Prisoner pleaded guilty, but having promised prosecutrix that he would pay the amount of damage, she declined to proceed further against him, and he was therefore discharged.

James Burns, master of the brig Gertrude, was charged with having assaulted Neil Peters, the cook and steward of that vessel. Peters, it appeared from evidence, asked defendant on Saturday to allow him to go on shore to see a magistrate in reference to a previous assault, and permission being refused, he went on shore without it. Defendant followed him, took hold of the collar of his coat, shook him, and knocked him down, his head falling against the handrail of a truck on the wharf, whereby his head was bruised and his forehead cut. Defendant was fined 20s., with costs of court and professional costs, Mr. Greer having appeared for plaintiff.

Neil Peters, the plaintiff in the previous case, was now charged with having absented himself from duty without leave. The circumstances were those as above stated, defendant alleging that he left the ship in order to see a magistrate. The case was dismissed.

Ann Dunbar, found guilty of using obscene language in George-street, was fined 10s., with the alternative of forty-eight hours' imprisonment.

Mary Jane Fielding, 22, prostitute, was charged with stealing a cape value 2s 6d. from the person of a child named Ellen Glover. Prisoner had nothing to say in defence; she, electing to be tried summarily, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment with hard labour.

Thomas Godfrey, late a seaman of the ship Oreo, found guilty of using insulting language towards David Jones, the master of that vessel, was fined £1, with costs; and Caroline Tweedie, for the use of insulting language towards Emily Wiles, was fined 10s., with costs.

LICENSING BUSINESS.—Applications to the Bench for bagatelle licences were granted as under:—To John Dick, Balmain Hotel, Balmain; and Richard Stephens, Glenmore Cottage, Cumberland-street.

TESTING OF THE MENANGLE BRIDGE.

A NUMBER of gentlemen, amongst whom were the Engineer-in-Chief for Railways, the Assistant Engineer, the Commissioner for Roads, the Superintendent of Telegraphs, Captain Mann, Mr. J. Russell, the Rev. W. B. Clarke, and several officers of the Railway Department, proceeded yesterday to Menangle, for the purpose of witnessing an official testing of the tubular girder railway bridge just completed across the Nepean. The party left Sydney by a special train at about half-past ten o'clock, and shortly before twelve o'clock reached Menangle, where they were met by Mr. Willcox, the agent for Sir M. Peto and Co., the contractors for the line to Picton. Conducted by him they proceeded to make a careful inspection of the bridge, and also of the approaches on either side. It may be necessary to mention that the bridge itself consists of a succession of tubular iron girders, resting on four massive stone piers, 150 feet apart, and that the approaches to the bridge on either bank are timber viaducts, that on the northern side being 980 feet in length, and that on the southern side 440 feet. Each of these viaducts is formed of bays of four upright piles and two battering piles, fixed with walings and braces, with openings of twenty-five feet; the superstructure consists of double longitudinal girders above the corbels, with transverse joists between; the planking is laid upon the upper girders, and above this is the ballasting and the permanent way. A test was first made of the strength of this portion of the work by means of a rod attached at the top to a girder in the centre of one of the openings, and which pointed to a gauge resting on the ground underneath. A heavy train was driven down and up at full speed along the viaduct, and the deflection in each case was found to be only five-sixteenths of an inch. After waiting for some time for the Minister for Works, and other gentlemen who were expected, the party adjourned to the contractors' office, where a substantial luncheon had been provided by Mr. Willcox; and justice having been done to the repast they proceeded to witness the testing of the more important and interesting part of the structure. For the purpose of ascertaining the amount of deflection, wire had been stretched close to each of the main girders; its ends were attached to posts resting on the tops of the end piers, and kept tight by heavy weights. Along the side of either girder were a number of cards marked off with eighths of an inch; and the elevation of the wire on any of these scales indicated the deflection of the girder at that part. A theodolite was also fixed on the parapet of one of the piers, from which observations were taken during the testing. The ordinary traffic along the bridge will be upon a single line of rails, but for the purpose of applying the most severe test that could be obtained, a second line was laid down, and five of the heaviest locomotive engines on the line were brought to the spot. Three of these engines coupled together were placed in succession over each of the openings, upon one line of rails; and while there, the other two engines drawing a train loaded with iron, weighing about two hundred tons, were driven at full speed on the other; the total weight at one time upon the span being not less than two hundred and ninety tons. The rapid motion of the long heavy train between the hollow tubes produced a loud rumbling noise and also considerable vibration, but as will be seen from the following particulars the deflection of the girders was very slight. On the first (northernmost) opening the deflection was on the up side half-an-inch, and on the down side three-sixteenths of an inch; on the centre opening the deflection was on the up side three-tenths of an inch, and on the down side four-tenths of an inch; and on the third opening on the up side, the deflection was six-tenths of an inch, and on the down side five-tenths of an inch. These results were severally confirmed by the theodolite, which was indeed a far more reliable gauge than the wire. Afterwards the five engines coupled together, with all the trucks, were run over the bridge, and the total deflection was the same as with the previous experiment—six-tenths of an inch. Upon the weights being taken off it was found that the girders had settled down a little more than a tenth of an inch. We need scarcely state that, as compared with structures of the same character and dimensions that have been tested in England, the deflection is extremely small. The experiments made yesterday satisfactorily demonstrated the immense strength of the girders, and having borne so enormous a weight with scarcely any deflection, passengers by the railway to Picton need not entertain any apprehensions for their safety while crossing the bridge. After the testing had been completed, the party were conveyed to the end of Sir M. Peto and Co.'s extension, travelling by the first train that had been taken to Picton; and, after remaining there about half an hour, returned to Sydney, arriving soon after seven o'clock.

CITY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL.

THE usual fortnightly meeting of the City Council was held in the Town-hall, Wynyard-square, at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. Present—the Right Worshipful the Mayor (in the chair), and Aldermen Sutherland, Oatley, Raphael, Hurley, Aitken, Woods, M'Keown, Button, Moore, Macintosh, Caraher, Watson, Steel, and Smithers.

MINUTES.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

REPORTS.

The following reports were brought up and received. From the Finance Committee, recommending payment of sundry accounts, namely, for city works, £676 16s. 11d.; for water purposes, £51 14s. 3d.; for sewerage, £555 14s 6d. Total, £1283 5s. 8d.; and from the same committee on tenders for kerbing and guttering in Cook and Fitzroy Wards. From the Improvement Committee, recommending the performance of work as follows:—Kerbing and guttering at the east end of Albion-street; a portion of Wyde-street; on the south side of Fitzroy-street, between Crown and Riley streets; in Lower Campbell-street; on the north side of Foveaux-street; on the east side of Smith-street, off Campbell-street; in Saunder's-lane, off Mount-street, Pyrmont, and a portion of the east side of Macquarie-street South. Repair or renewal of guttering on the west side of Castlereagh-street, between Brougham-place and King-street, and ditto on the west side of Castlereagh-street, between Hosking-place and Brougham-place. Blue-metalling the following streets:—Lower Campbell-street; Campbell-street, between Crown and Bourke-streets; York-lane South; Riley-street, between the South Head Road and Campbell-street. Ballasting and blinding of Point-street, Pyrmont; and Riley-street, from Campbell-street to Gipps-street. Formation and ballasting a portion of Harris-street, and erection of a plank crossing over Black Wattle Creek. From the Water Committee, recommending the laying of a water-main in Glebe Road; and also the laying of a four-inch water-main in Bent and Bligh streets, in lieu of the present three-inch. From the Lighting Committee, recommending the erection of a public lamp in Corfu-street, at the junction of Burrahpore-street; another at the corner of Little Elizabeth and Cooper streets; another in Gipps-street, between George and Pitt streets; and another in Devonshire-street, near the corner of the Benevolent Asylum Grounds.

PETITIONS.

Alderman SUTHERLAND presented a petition from about 500 citizens, praying the Council to complete the No. 1 Volunteer Fire Engine Station-house, by adding another story to it. Received, and referred to the Finance Committee.

Alderman STEEL presented a petition from a number of citizens, praying for the removal of wood-cart stands from Botany-street and South Head Road. Received, and referred to the By-laws Committee.

Alderman STEEL presented a petition from a number of labourers, setting forth that their means of subsistence was taken from them in consequence of the metal from Pennant Hills, for the streets of the city, being broken by the stone-breaking machines, and praying the Council to cause the metal to be sent down to the city in bulk. Received, and referred to the Improvement Committee.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The following correspondence was read by the Town Clerk:—

"Department of Public Works, Sydney, 15th June, 1863.

"SIR,—In reference to my letter of the 3rd instant, on the subject of your communication representing the dangerous state of the Circular Quay in Woolloomooloo Bay, from the absence of fencing and lighting, I am directed by the Secretary for Public Works to inform you that this wharf is at present incomplete, and is only used for passenger purposes in the daytime, and I am to add that until it is proclaimed and leased for general wharf purposes, and certainly while in progress as an unfinished work, where no thoroughfare exists, it is not desirable to incur an expenditure which is quite unnecessary for the purpose of its construction, or for the use which is permitted to be made of it.

"I have the honour to be, Sir,

"Your most obedient servant,

"JOHN RAE.

"The Town Clerk, Sydney."

"Department of Lands, Sydney, 19th June, 1863.

"SIR,—With reference to my letter of the 1st April last, in which interview applied for by you on behalf of the Right Worshipful the Mayor and Alderman Oatley, with reference to the state of the mud flats at the head of Woolloomooloo Bay, was postponed in consequence of the absence of the Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers, I am now directed by the Secretary for Lands to apprise you, for the information of his Worship, that a contract has been taken for filling in these flats, and the work is being proceeded with.

"I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

"MICHAEL FITZPATRICK.

"The Town Clerk."

QUESTIONS.

Alderman WOODS wished to know why the contract for kerbing and guttering in Denison Ward was not being carried out?

The MAYOR said he had endeavoured to get the contractor to carry out his contract, but having failed he had given him notice to throw up his contract, and he (the Mayor) had called for fresh tenders. A new contractor would probably be appointed in the course of a week or so. He might also remark that he had acted similarly in regard to the contractor for Gipps Ward.

Alderman WATSON asked the Mayor whether any answer had been received from the Government to a communication in reference to the opening of a road from Argyle-street to and round the Flagstaff.

The MAYOR replied in the negative.

Alderman MACINTOSH called the attention of the Mayor to the disgraceful condition of the awning posts in the principal streets of the city—either leaning on the footpaths or on the streets—and wished to know whether a report which he (Alderman Macintosh) had moved for about twelve months ago had been brought up?

The MAYOR said no report had been brought up, and he thought, as so long a time had elapsed, that the matter might have slipped the Engineer's memory.

Alderman STEEL said he had been requested to ask why the rate for watering Liverpool-street, in the vicinity of Lyons-terrace was so high?

The MAYOR said the rate was in proportion to the amount expended. He might state that a petition had been received from certain citizens resident in Lyons-terrace, and that the watering of the street in that locality would be discontinued.

Alderman MOORE called the MAYOR's attention to the goat nuisance, and asked if anything could be done to remedy it?

The MAYOR said the Corporation had no power to move in the matter, but he would cause a letter to be written to the Inspector-General of Police on the subject.

Alderman OATLEY said he had given notice of a question in reference to the nuisance of shooting nightsoil in the neighbourhood of the Randwick Road, but it had occurred to him that a committee was appointed in 1860, to report upon the matter. No report, however, had been brought up, but he had been informed that this committee was still in existence, and with the view of bringing the matter before the (Corporation) committee on Thursday next, he would not now ask the question of which he had given notice.

FINANCE.

Alderman OATLEY moved, "That the report of the Finance Committee, received this day, recommending the payment of sundry accounts, be adopted."

The motion was seconded by Alderman RAPHAEL, put, and carried.

CAMBRIDGE-STREET.

Alderman CARAHER moved "That the report of the Improvement Committee, received on the 23rd March, recommending the formation, ballasting, and blinding of Cambridge-street, between Essex-street and Cribb's-lane, at a cost not exceeding £140, be adopted."

The motion was seconded by Alderman WATSON, put, and carried.

CUMBERLAND-STREET.

Alderman WATSON moved, "That the report of the Improvement Committee, received on the 11th ultimo, recommending the erection of a stone bridge in Cumberland-street, by contract be adopted."

The motion having been seconded by Alderman CARAHER, it was put, and passed.

BENT AND BLIGH STREETS.

Alderman AITKEN moved, "That the report of the Water Committee, received this day, recommending the substitution of a 4-inch watermain (in the place of the present 3-inch main) in Bent and Bligh streets, at a cost not exceeding £10, be adopted."

Alderman RAPHAEL having seconded the motion, it was put, and adopted.

COOK AND FITZROY WARDS.

Aldermen SMITHERS moved, "That the report of the Finance Committee, received this day, recommending the acceptance of Jonathan Corben's tender for laying kerbing and guttering in Cook and Fitzroy Wards, during the current year, be adopted."

The motion was seconded by Alderman STEEL, put, and carried.

BRISBANE-STREET.

Alderman SMITHERS moved, "That the report of the Improvement Committee, received on the 23rd March, recommending the repair of Brisbane-street, from the South Head Road to Goulburn-street, at a cost not exceeding £50, be adopted."

The motion was seconded by Alderman STEEL, put, and adopted.

RILEY-STREET.

Alderman STEEL moved, "That the report of the Improvement Committee, received on the 13th April, recommending the building of a retaining wall in Riley-street, by contract, be adopted."

The motion was seconded by Alderman SMITHERS, put, and adopted.

VICTORIA-STREET.

Alderman SUTTON moved, "That the report of the Improvement Committee, received on the 13th ultimo, recommending the formation, ballasting and blinding of a portion of Victoria-street North, by contract; and also, that kerbing and guttering be laid, at a cost not exceeding £190, be adopted."

Motion seconded by Alderman STEEL, put and carried.

WYLDE-STREET.

Alderman SUTTON moved, "That the report of the Improvement Committee, received this day, recommending that kerbing and guttering be laid in Wylde-street, at a cost not exceeding £125, be adopted."

Alderman OATLEY having seconded the motion, it was put and carried.

ELIZABETH-STREET.

Alderman SUTHERLAND moved, "That the report of the Improvement Committee, received on the 23rd March, recommending that Elizabeth-street, for a distance of 100 yards north from Devonshire-street, be formed and ballasted, at a cost not exceeding £70, be adopted."

The motion was seconded by Alderman OATLEY, put and adopted.

GIPPS-STREET.

Alderman SUTHERLAND moved, "That the report of the Lighting Committee, received this day, recommending that a public lamp be erected on the south side of Gipps-street, between George and Pitt streets, be adopted."

Motion seconded by Alderman OATLEY, put, and carried.

BLACK WATTLE CREEK.

Alderman M'KEOWN moved, "That the report of the Improvement Committee, received this day, recommending that a 6-feet plank crossing be laid over Black Wattle Creek, at the end of Ultimo-street, at a cost not exceeding £35, be adopted."

Alderman WOODS having seconded the motion, it was put and passed.

The Council rose at twenty minutes to four o'clock.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS THIS DAY.

QUESTIONS.

Mr. Darvall to ask the Secretary for Public Works, Whether it is the intention of the Government to place upon the Estimates any and what sum of money for building a bridge over Bank-street, East Maitland, or for otherwise relieving East Maitland from the periodical floods which are caused by the railway embankment across that street.

Mr. Close to ask the Secretary for Lands, Whether it is his intention to introduce a bill for the promotion of Drainage this session?

Mr. Close to ask the Secretary for Public Works, 1. When is it the intention of the Government to finish the extension to Morpeth of the Great Northern Line? 2. To what point will such extension reach? 3. Whether the Government is aware that, owing to the non-completion of the fencing along the line aforesaid, public safety is endangered? 4. When will any preparation be made to provide platforms, passenger and goods stations, at Morpeth and the Junction at East Maitland? 5. When will the £10,000 voted last year by Parliament for wharves and coal shoots at Morpeth be expended?

Mr. W. Forster to ask the Colonial Secretary, When will the papers, ordered by the House, on 24th June, 1862, having reference to the payment of costs by the Government in the matter of the Municipality of Shoalhaven, so called, be laid upon the table?

Mr. Leary to ask the Secretary for Public Works, Whether the Government intend to place a sum of money on the Estimates for the reclamation of Woolloomooloo Bay?

Mr. Leary to ask the Secretary for Public Works—1. What has been the cost of the Circular Wharf at Woolloomooloo Bay? 2. What is to be the cost of the stone wall at Woolloomooloo Bay?

Dr. Lang to ask the Secretary for Lands, Whether it is the intention of Government, during the present session of Parliament, to take the requisite steps for the enclosure, planting, and ornamentation of those portions of ground within this city—as, for example, Church Hill and the vicinity of the Flagstaff—that are still the property of the Crown, and an eyesore to the public in their actual state?

Dr. Lang to ask the Colonial Secretary, Whether it is the intention of Government, during the present session of Parliament, to take advantage of the present peculiarly favourable crisis in the mother-country, by initiating the requisite measures for ensuring an extensive immigration of a superior character from the United Kingdom to this colony?

Mr. Dangar to ask the Secretary for Lands, 1. If the road from

SAUCE.—LEA and PERRINS' WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE, pronounced by connoisseurs to be the only good sauce, and applicable to every variety of dish.

Extract of a letter from a Medical Gentleman at Madras to his brother at Worcester, May, 1851.—"Tell Lea and Perrins that their sauce is highly esteemed in India, and is, in my opinion, the most palatable as well as the most wholesome sauce that is made."

CAUTION.

LEA and PERRINS beg to caution the public against spurious imitations of their celebrated Worcestershire Sauce.

L. and P. have discovered that several of the foreign markets have been supplied with spurious imitations, the labels closely resembling those of the genuine sauce, and in one or more instances the names of L. and P. forged.

L. and P. will proceed against any one who may manufacture or vend such imitations, and have instructed their correspondents in the various parts of the world, to advise them of any infringement of their rights.

Ask for Lea and Perrins' Sauce.

a first-rate herd.
Stock horses, stores, &c., to be taken at a valuation.
☞ MORT and CO. confidently recommend this station as one of the FINEST CATTLE PROPERTIES in the Gwydir district, and really WELL ADAPTED FOR SHEEP. In the neighbourhood of some of the choicest stations, within sixteen days' draft of Maitland, GUNEE possesses advantages which should render it a most desirable investment for those in search of a REALLY VALUABLE CATTLE PROPERTY.
Personal inspection is invited and the fullest particulars may be obtained at the Rooms, Pitt-street.

WEDNESDAY, 1st JULY.

SPECIAL ATTENTION directed to the Gigantic Sale of BUILDING ALLOTMENTS, comprising the whole of that splendid BLOCK OF LAND originally intended as a site for the TOWN HALL, having extensive frontages to the following streets:—
160½ FEET to BRIDGE-STREET
240 FEET to ELIZABETH-STREET
248 FEET to BENT-STREET
391 FEET to PHILLIP-STREET.
MORT and CO.

TO CAPITALISTS, MERCHANTS, and BUILDERS.—Particular attention is requested to the Sale by Public Auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on WEDNESDAY 1st July, of 26 FIRST-CLASS BUILDING SITES, occupying a position undeniably among THE VERY BEST IN THE CITY, in proximity to the WHOLE OF THE PUBLIC OFFICES including both Houses of Parliament, and also THE CIRCULAR QUAY, and contiguous to the BOTANIC GARDENS and THE DOMAIN.
MORT and CO.

CITY OF SYDNEY.

Gigantic Sale
BUILDING ALLOTMENTS,
Comprising the whole of that splendid BLOCK of LAND originally intended as a site for the TOWN HALL, having extensive frontages to the following streets:—
160½ FEET TO BRIDGE-STREET
240 FEET TO ELIZABETH-STREET,
248 FEET TO BENT-STREET, and
391 FEET TO PHILLIP-STREET.
Title—Direct from the Crown.

MORT and CO. have been instructed by the Right Worshipful the Mayor of Sydney to sell by public auction, at the Room Pitt-street, on WEDNESDAY, 1st July,
The above BLOCK of CITY PROPERTY, in all comprising an AREA OF NEARLY TWO ACRES, with extensive frontages, as detailed above and as recently SUBDIVIDED INTO 26 FIRST-CLASS BUILDING SITES, as follows—
7 ALLOTMENTS fronting BRIDGE-STREET
10 ALLOTMENTS fronting PHILLIP-STREET
9 ALLOTMENTS fronting ELIZABETH-STREET together with a LARGE BLOCK OF LAND,
having frontage to Bent-street, Elizabeth-street and Phillip-street.

☞ Hardly ever before has there been such an opportunity afforded to the moneyed intending purchasing really splendid building sites, and selecting from a large extent of frontage to four leading streets. The position of the allotments now about to be brought to public sale is undeniably among
THE VERY BEST IN THE CITY.
Their proximity to the WHOLE OF THE PUBLIC OFFICES,
including both Houses of Parliament,
TO MANY OF THE LEADING MERCANTILE HOUSES, and also to
THE GREAT SHIPPING OUTLET—THE CIRCULAR QUAY, give to them advantages, in a business point of view, perhaps not possessed by any allotments in the metropolis, whilst their
CONTIGUITY TO THE BOTANIC GARDENS AND THE DOMAIN
also renders them equally available sites for first-class private dwelling-houses.
LITHOGRAPHS now ready for distribution.

PRELIMINARY ADVERTISEMENT.

THE ASH ISLAND ESTATE,
RIVER HUNTER.

Beyond doubt one of the very
FINEST AGRICULTURAL and HORTICULTURAL ESTATES in the AUSTRALIAN COLONIES.

MORT and CO. have received instructions from the Honorable A. W. Scott, Esq., to sell by public auction, at Newcastle, on an early date, of which due notice will be given,
The whole of the
TRULY MAGNIFICENT ESTATE, known as
ASH ISLAND,
comprising an area of 2841 ACRES, with many miles river frontage to the River Hunter, distant only 4½ MILES FROM NEWCASTLE,
and including the homestead, with gardens, orangery, extensive cultivation, grass and orchards, and a large number of farms, many of which are enclosed, cleared, and have convenient buildings upon them.
This splendid property has been recently most carefully surveyed and subdivided, and it will be sold in farms to suit all classes of purchasers. The object of the present preliminary advertisement is simply to announce the fact that it will shortly be submitted to public competition, in order that all who may be on the look-out for homesteads, may avail themselves of an opportunity, the like of which has never before been presented to them.
TO THE AGRICULTURAL INTEREST

Among the many claims which the Ash Island Estate possesses, entitling it to be looked upon as one the finest estates in the colonies, the following few are sufficient for the present purpose.
1. THE SOIL is composed of RICH ALUVIAL deposit, and is capable of producing, to any extent, large and profitable crops of ALL KINDS OF FRUITS, the ORANGE being pre-eminent—of MAIZE, LUCERNE, OATS, ALL KINDS OF VEGETABLES, and COTTON—the growth of the latter being peculiarly vigorous.
2. The FACILITIES OF WATER and LAND CARRIAGE are as great as could possibly be wished for. The estate has a vast extent of frontage the river Hunter, with any extent of deep water, to enable vessels to load direct from the spot. On the other hand, the GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY passes along the adjacent river bank, at the back of the estate, and secures that perfect land carriage.
3. ITS PROXIMITY TO NEWCASTLE (the second great shipping port of New South Wales), to Maitland, West Maitland, Raymond Terrace, and Morpeth, is particularly ensures a ready market for all kinds of produce, rather secured by the facilities for export to all the ports and seaports of New South Wales and the adjacent colonies.
4. THE COAL.—From various experiments at different places, made by careful boring, coal of excellent quality has been invariably found, showing that the seam underlying the whole island would probably prove a good working one, and, from the position, well adapted for inexpensive shipment, no engineering difficulty existing, and deep water frontage along the river banks.
5. The Estate is NOT LIABLE TO BE FLOODED—a very material feature to all who have had experience of farming in this colony.

With these few facts before them, all who are in search of a farm, or home for their families, are invited to avail themselves of the forthcoming opportunity.
Full particulars will be shortly published, including time and day of sale.
Large plan and lithographs in course of preparation.
TITLE—unquestionable. It is now being brought under TORRENS' ACT.

IMPERATIVE SALE.

QUEENSLAND.
NOGOA DISTRICT.

"NARDOO,"
A FIRST-CLASS RUN,
Distant about 285 miles from Rockhampton.
Together with 10,100 SHEEP.

Terms—One-third cash; residue by approved bills at twelve and twenty-four months, with bank discount, secured upon the stock and stations.

MORT and CO. have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, THIS DAY, 30th June,
That first-class run NARDOO, situate in the Nogoa district, recently taken up under the Pastoral Occupation Act, of 1862.
The run comprises three blocks, the general character of the country being undulating downs and broad leaf ironbark ridges, and well watered—as was amply tested during the late severe drought—during the whole of which there was
PERMANENT WATER.
With the above valuable run will be sold the following sheep:—

EWES—2½ years and upwards (Very few old sheep)	3340
Maidens	1400
WEANERS—mixed sexes	2635
WETHERS—2 years old	1200
3 to 5 years old	1360
RAMS	115
Total	10,100 more or less.

 The sheep are in prime condition, and the rams have been put in the ewe flocks to secure a lambing to commence in August.
Two first-class teams, with drays and tackling complete; 16 horses, with carts, harness, stores, implements, &c., to be taken at a valuation.

☞ Attention is particularly requested to the sale of this property, which is under imperative instructions from the proprietor, now absent from the colony. It affords an opportunity of securing a very choice lot of sheep, together with a considerable extent of very superior country. The improvements comprise a few huts and sheepyards, the runs having only been recently occupied.

CLEVELAND-STREET, SURRY HILLS.

6 ALLOTMENTS OF LAND.

Title—Unquestionable. For particulars apply to WILLIAM RUSSELL, Esq., Solicitor, Mort's-buildings, Pitt-street.

MORT and CO. have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on WEDNESDAY, 1st July,
Those 6 capital allotments of land, situate in CLEVELAND-STREET, between Bourke-street and the Crown land to the east, as follows:—
5 allotments with about 30 feet each frontage to said street, by a depth of about 173 feet.
1 allotment with about 43 feet 6 inches frontage to said street, by a depth of about 173 feet.

These allotments, situate on the south side of Cleveland-street, occupy a very favourable position, and from their great depth possess advantages not ordinarily to be met with. They are in the market for bona fide sale.

Building Land in Sussex-street, near the Market Wharf.

T. W. BOWDEN will sell by auction, at the Land Sale Rooms, 154, Pitt-street, on THURSDAY, the 9th of July, at 11 o'clock.
A very desirable piece of land, sufficient for the erection of two shops and dwellings, in a busy part of the city, a few doors south of Market-street, in Sussex-street, directly opposite the Wharves in that part of Darling Harbour where a great traffic in timber, coals, hay, grain, potatoes, butter, &c., is continually carried on.

The allotment has a frontage to the east side of Sussex-street of 62 links or 41 feet, by a depth of 180 links or 118 feet 10 inches, and is bounded on the north by premises now occupied by Mr. Benjamin Hodgson
Title, satisfactory.—Terms at sale.

A Cottage and Ground in Upper Fort-street, opposite the National School.

T. W. BOWDEN is instructed to sell by auction, at the Land Sale Rooms, 154, Pitt-street, on THURSDAY, the 9th of July, at 11 o'clock,
A cottage on the east side of Upper Fort-street, opposite the National School, being the first on the right hand upon entering Fort-street from Prince-street, and described in the deed of grant as allotment 5 of section 72, bounded on the west by the building line of Fort-street bearing south 71 links, on the south by allotment 4 bearing east 53 links, on the east by allotment 4 bearing north 68 links, and on the north by allotment 6 bearing east 7 degrees 30 minutes south 57 links.
Terms at sale.

The Cricketers Arms, Elizabeth-street, with three Houses on the North side, and one at the rear, bounded on the South by the land lately purchased by the Government for the erection of a Free Library.
For Sale by Auction, by order of the Executors of the late Mr. Thomas Douglass.

T. W. BOWDEN is favoured with instructions, from the Executors, to sell by auction, at the Land Sale Rooms, 154, Pitt-street, on THURSDAY, the 9th of July, at 11 o'clock,
The whole of that valuable block of land, in Elizabeth-street, fronting Hyde Park, between Market and Park streets, together with the buildings erected thereon, comprising
THE CRICKETERS' ARMS Public-house, formerly known as Douglass's, but now in the occupation of Mr. James Holland, an old established house, very favourably known, and always well supported.
The house has a verandah in front, the whole length of the building. The bar is large and conveniently situated. Adjoining are two parlours, a store-room for the stock-in-trade. Three bedrooms in the main building, two rooms and kitchen at the rear, and a private entrance at the south side.
On the North of the public-house are three residences, tenanted by Messrs. Lewis and others.
At the rear is a small cottage of three rooms.
The frontage to Elizabeth-street is 90 feet by a depth of 64 feet in the North, and 81 feet on the south side—a little more or less.

☞ The auctioneer deems it quite unnecessary to say a word in praise of the situation of the above-mentioned property as a site for the erection of first-class residences, for it is unquestionably the best in the city, and must be well known to all who are likely to become purchasers. It very seldom occurs that land fronting the Park, having also an easterly aspect, can be obtained at any price, so that the present opportunity should not be neglected. The Free Library, about to be erected by the Government on the southern boundary of these premises, will doubtless be an ornament to this part of the city, and a great convenience and benefit to the residents in the vicinity.
It is intended to sell the whole in one lot.
Terms at sale.

To Ironmongers, Crockery Dealers, and others.

MR. H. D. COCKBURN has been instructed by Mr. Francis Guy (in consequence of his leaving Sydney) to sell by public auction, without reserve, on WEDNESDAY, 1st July, at 11 o'clock, on premises, Botany-street, Redfern,

WRIGHT'S CREEK, MACDONAL

BOURKE.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT.]

JUNE 13.—Thursday last being the day set apart by the Government for the celebration of the marriage of the Prince of Wales, a few of the residents of the district who were then in Bourke on business, determined not to be behind any of her Majesty's subjects in other parts of the colony in a manifestation of their loyalty on such an occasion. They accordingly resolved to dine together. The dinner was prepared by the proprietor of the Bourke Hotel in his best style, and the spread was an excellent one, and would have done credit to many caterers at hotels of more pretensions. The gentlemen assembled enjoyed themselves as well, I dare say, as if they had been at the Royal, the appetites of some of them being quickened by the journeys they had had that day in coming to Bourke. The police magistrate presided. After full justice had been done to the edibles provided, and the tables cleared, the demonstrative part of the business was proceeded with. The usual etiquette was observed in the order of the toasts—"The Queen," "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and the Rose of Denmark," "The Governor, Sir John Young," &c. The respective toasts were introduced in appropriate terms, by the chairman. The party prolonged their sitting till near midnight, and then separated, having, by their meeting together to celebrate this auspicious event, proved, though cut off from the centres of civilisation, and residents in this remote corner of her Majesty's dominion, that their hearts beat with as true a pulse as any in the empire.

On the 29th ultimo three informations were laid before the Bench against parties suspected of having scabby sheep—one a travelling flock, the others on stations on the Bogan. The Bench appointed Mr. Hugh Cameron, a gentleman who has had a large experience in Victoria of sheep infected with scab, under the provisions of the Scab Act. I may here remark that Mr. Cameron has reported the travelling flock to be clean, but has not yet returned from the Bogan; but by two travellers we learn that one of the flocks he inspected has been declared scabby.

On the day above named, immediately after the business of the Court was concluded, the gentlemen interested in sheep properties determined to call a meeting of the sheep owners of the neighbourhood, to be held at Bourke on the 11th June—Thursday last. As several of the gentlemen invited had to come a considerable distance, it was late in the day when they arrived here, and as the dinner above reported was to come off at five o'clock it was determined to defer the holding of the meeting till the following day, which was accordingly done. The subject was discussed in its various bearings on the interests of the sheep owners in the district, and their deliberations resulted in memorialising the Government to appoint an inspector for the district. It was thought advisable, however, as several weeks must elapse, supposing the Government granted the request of the memorialists, before such an officer could reach the scene of his labours, that something more should be done. Various plans were suggested, but, eventually, the meeting determined to appoint a ranger, at their own cost, whose business it should be to travel through the district, and report any travelling sheep that might be entering or travelling through it. A numerous committee was appointed, to the members of which he was to report, when action was to be taken accordingly. Mr. R. M. Hughes was appointed chairman, to whom the ranger was to look for instructions in the discharge of his ordinary duties. The meeting agreed to a resolution pledging themselves to pay the costs connected with this appointment, and to indemnify Mr. Hughes in the current outlay, to be assessed rateably among them according to their respective interests. The ranger was to receive a salary at the rate of £150 per year and the necessary horses; the first engagement to be for six months. William Smith, an active and intelligent man, who has recently been acting as a constable under local authority, has received the appointment and entered upon his duties. The greatest unanimity prevailed in the meeting; and they were of opinion, as the danger was so imminent, the most energetic measures should be adopted to prevent its introduction into this now and hitherto clean country. An opinion was expressed that the Scab Act honestly worked was quite sufficient to arrest the progress of the evil, and eventually to extirpate it. Only let efficient inspectors be appointed, and the respective benches which may be set in motion by the sheep owners, or inspectors, enforce the provisions of the Act, and it will, I have no doubt, prove amply sufficient.

THE MURDER OF JOHN M'BRIDE, BY BUSHRANGERS.

(From the Burrangong Star of Saturday.)

An inquest was held at the hospital, Young, before the coroner, Dr. Robert Faider, and a jury of five, on the body of John M'Bride, then and there lying dead.

Margaret Sinnet, having been sworn, deposed: I am a widow, and live at Duffer Gully; I did not know the deceased; on Sunday last, about eight o'clock in the morning, two men came to my place on horseback, and asked for a glass of gin and rum; they gave me a pound note to change, which I did, and returned them the change; they then asked if I had any tea; I said "Yes," and gave them each a mug of tea; I asked them if they had come from Lambing Flat; they said, "No, they'll take care they'll not let us in there;" this made me suspect they were bushrangers, and I looked at them more closely; one of them opened his coat, and I saw his belt lined all round with revolvers; they had each holsters on their saddles; one of their horses was a light bay, ridden by a dark man, more than thirty years old; they left after having tea and went towards Lambing Flat; I watched the two men, to see which way they would go; when they reached the first place on the road, a hut occupied by Mrs. Beck, I saw smoke, and heard the report of fire-arms; more than five shots were fired, but I could not say how many; the men rode about, crossing the road two or, and then went to Lambing Flat; after firing; they dismounted from their horses; I shortly after saw some men carry another man into Mrs. Beck's; I went over about half an hour after, and found a man lying upon the bed; he was groaning, and appeared to be very bad; I think the men who had been at my house had shot him, as I saw them firing off their horses; I should know the men who were at my house, if I saw them; the bushrangers were not disguised.

Henry Wilkinson, having been sworn, deposed: I am a legally qualified medical practitioner, and reside at Young; on Sunday about noon, I was called to see deceased at Duffer Gully; I found he had received a gunshot wound on the right thigh, the ball having passed through the limb; when I first saw him there was no bleeding; he shortly after my entrance requested his mates to shove him on the floor of the hut, in order that he might have a stool; on being moved he had a violent attack of vomiting, and a slight bleeding took place; about three to four ounces, I should estimate; I removed him to a stretcher, and applied a compress and silk handkerchief over it, which quite checked the hemorrhage; gave him some brandy and water; I did not think his wound immediately of a serious character; I ordered some brandy and water to be given him occasionally, and left him; yesterday about the same hour I visited him, and was informed that he had been delirious all night, and up to the time I saw him he continued so; no hemorrhage had taken place since my first visit; his mates asked if I thought he might be removed to the hospital; I replied he was very well where he was and I did not approve of it; they said there was very little accommodation for him there, and that they could not continue their attendance upon him, &c., whereupon I reluctantly consented to his removal; he was sent in with a spring-cart to be removed to an inn; he died on the road; I have this day made a post-mortem examination, and find that the ball entered on the outer side of the thigh, about seven or eight inches above the knee-joint, passed downwards and inwards, coming out about four inches above the joint; it had not touched the femoral artery or nerve, but went a quarter of an inch behind them; I think the hemorrhage had come from some small branch of an artery supplying the muscles; I think the wound was sufficient to account for his death; taken in connection with the shock given to his nervous system.

Alfred Lablonde having been sworn, deposed: I am a miner, and live at the Twelve Mile Rush; I knew the deceased who was a miner, and resided at the Twelve Mile Rush; on Sunday morning, coming home from the Flat, between half-past nine and ten o'clock, I saw him lying by a tree at the Duffer Gully, close to a hut; I asked him where he was wounded, he said in the leg; he told me his name, and I then knew him, but did not at first recognise him; he said if there had not been two they would not have taken his pistol from him; he said "I had no chance at all they were one on each side of me;" he said he had fired five shots at them; I met two men on horseback shortly before coming to where he lay, about two hundred yards; they said to me and two diggers whom I had overtaken on the road, "If you've got any money, you had better hand it over, or we might serve you the same as we have served a 'bravado' that we have just shot in the leg, and is lying by a tree close by;" one rode a tall chestnut horse, his rider was a dark man with whiskers and moustache; the other rode a bay horse; he was a fair man without any hair upon his face, he seemed about twenty-two or twenty-four years old; wore a cabbage-tree hat; he had a large single-barrelled pistol in his hand; the dark man seemed about thirty-six years old, or thereabouts; I think I should be able to recognise them; the elder man wore a felt hat, round over the top; the two men and myself carried M'Bride into the hut, near to where we had found him; his pockets were turned inside out when I first saw him; he said they had robbed him of five or six shillings, which was all he had with him; at his request I took off his boots and coat; the boot was full of blood, and there was a good deal of blood all round the tree where he had been shot; he was very pale and much exhausted when I found him from the loss of blood he had sustained, as I supposed; he complained of being very cold in his feet, and wished the wounded leg to be bathed constantly with warm water; two other men were standing with the other two men whom I have mentioned before as having overtaken at the junction of the Tipperary and Three Mile Rush roads; they said they had been stack-up also by the two horsemen, that M'Bride was behind them; and seeing what was going on, he went off the road into the bush, and fired at the horsemen; they returned the fire and then the battle between them began in which he was wounded.

The jury returned a verdict that "He died from the effects of a gunshot wound, inflicted by one of two armed men by whom he was attacked and robbed; and added, as a rider, their opinion that the Executive Government are deserving of the severest censure in not devising effective and stringent measures to suppress the crime of bushranging, now rampant in this district."

LIABILITY OF JUDGES TO CRITICISM.

To the Editor of the Herald.

SIR,—If it really be true, as one hears suggested of late, that a claim has been set up, and is supposed to be well-founded, which would have the effect of exempting Judges from criticism, or if need be from censure, in respect of their public acts or judgments, I know of nothing more dangerous to the liberty of the Press, or to the well-being of the community. Such a claim, if established, would go far to set the Judges practically above all law, and to stifle alike effective complaint and inquiry, in respect of any errors at any time committed by them. I certainly am not aware that the claim has been advanced; but the bare suggestion of such a doctrine as it involves is alarming, and it cannot be too soon or too energetically denounced.

Holding it then as an important principle, that the sayings and doings of our Judges, like those of other public men, are open to the freest examination, I turn to their judgment in the late case of the Mains; and I sentend broadly, that if the Chief Justice, on that occasion, overstepped the proper line of his duty, and offered comments on the objects or policy of the Lands Alienation Act, the Press and the public had a clear and undoubted right to canvass the propriety of such a course. Mr. Robertson, as a minister, it may be conceded, was more bound than any other man to the use of measured language, especially when addressing an excited audience on so inflammatory a topic; and I will admit that offensive expressions, levity and ridicule, or imputations on the Judge of discreditable motives and dishonourable conduct, cannot be excused in a person occupying such a position, if in any one. But what I maintain is this: that if Mr. Robertson's remarks were in themselves appropriate, and in substance fairly or reasonably called for, his rights, as a citizen, were not destroyed by that position.

The principle being thus ascertained, I proceed to consider the nature of the Chief Justice's observations, and then the question how far they justified a severe or harsh commentary. I have for this purpose no other materials to guide me—and perhaps they are not perfectly accurate—than your own newspaper report of the 4th ultimo; and, without pretending to be a lawyer, I think that the matter lies in a small compass, and is very intelligible. In the first place, his Honor comments on the proceedings of Main and his wife, showing how little they were entitled to assistance from the Court on the merits of their case. Secondly, the learned Judge points out the irregularities and errors attending their conviction; which, on those grounds, the Court held to be unmaintainable. In the third place, he announces the conclusion of the Court that the impounding, nevertheless, was technically illegal; partly, as I understand the report, because the selection was not within the Lands Act, but chiefly because a married woman has herself no power to impound cattle. Fourthly (the report adds), "His Honor was very much disposed to think with Mr. Justice Hilliard, who had advised with them in the case, that free selectors had no right to impound until they obtained a grant; and he threw out this hint for consideration in the proper quarter." The Judge proceeds to explain the point thus: That the Impounding Act had only given "a right of impounding to the occupiers of Crown land under license or other permission," whereas, the right of the free selector was different, as the land had ceased to be Crown land, and he had an "equitable right" to it himself.

This, after careful examination of your report, I find to be the whole of the Chief Justice's judgment. From Mr. Robertson's Shoalhaven speech, one would really have imagined that Sir Alfred had in some way forgotten himself, and commented on the Lands Alienation measure. So far from it, I perceive that not one word will bear such an interpretation. The proceedings of Mr. and Mrs. Main, no doubt, may be thought by squatters and their friends to afford an apt and natural illustration of the free selection system; and the truth seems to be, that Mr. Robertson felt that those proceedings would be so regarded by the public. But it is remarkable that the Chief Justice, so far from countenancing any such notion, intimates that this particular selection was not within the Alienation Act, and therefore was no portion of that system. Mr. Robertson's complaint against the Judge consequently comes to this, that he did not so word his judgment as to keep the facts out of view—or, at all events, so smooth and gloss them over as not to attract attention.

But not only does the fact appear that no comment was made on the nature, policy, or objects of Mr. Robertson's land measure, your report shows that not even a defect was imputed to it. The difficulty suggested by their Honors was, that the Impounding Act appears to limit the right of impounding to persons of whom Mrs. Main was not one. It would be presumptuous in a layman to express any opinion on such a point, but certainly she occupied the land in her own right, and not at all under the Crown. There was a doubt, therefore, which the Judges thought it desirable that the Legislature, then on the eve of assembling, should be asked to amend. Now, I well remember that Mr. Robertson openly avowed, in more than one of the discussions last session on his Impounding Bill, that the latter was a most important measure in connection with the Lands Acts. I have retained my copy of that bill, and the first thing which meets the eye in it, singularly enough, is a new definition clause of a more comprehensive character than the old one. It seems to me to have been framed, evidently, to meet the very difficulty suggested by the Judges; since the term "owner" is thereby declared to include "every occupier of land under whatever tenure." And if this conjecture be well founded, it does seem inexplicable that Mr. Robertson should have found fault with the Chief Justice for merely hitting on the same idea.

My conclusion on the whole is, first, that although Mr. Robertson had a right to defend his Lands Selection Act by whomsoever assailed, yet that Act was not attacked at all; and secondly, that in the particular points which appear most to have excited him, his censures were singularly uncalled for and unjust.

I am yours obediently,

PUBLICOLA.

RAILWAY REFORM.

To the Editor of the Herald.

SIR,—About two years since I was induced to purchase, and at considerable outlay to improve, a property at Burwood, the cost of transit by railway to and from Sydney being carefully considered, and mainly determining the investment.

In my simplicity, I assumed that the rates then existing, which had been established after long discussions and agitations on the subject, could be relied upon as permanent, more especially as the wisdom of their adoption had been demonstrated by the amount of the railway receipts steadily improving.

Suddenly, however, and without any previous notice, a fiat has been issued increasing the rates generally, and to which I should offer no objection but for the violent manner in which residents along the line, season ticket holders, have been treated, the alterations involving in their case an increase of upwards of fifty per cent. on the single yearly ticket, and more than 100 per cent. on the family monthly tickets. The quarterly, half-yearly, and yearly tickets are abolished, and none but monthly season tickets are in future to be issued at increased rates, and without any deduction, as hitherto, for bona fide members of the same family. Its effect, in my case, which will fairly illustrate others, will be to increase my expenditure upwards of £40 per annum, as will appear by the following statement:—

	Present Rates.	Month.
Four monthly family tickets at £1 10s. 8d. ...	£6 2 8
Deduct 50 per cent.	3 1 4
		3 1 4
Occasional travelling by other members of family and servants		3 0 0
	£6 1 4
	Future Rates.
Four monthly tickets at £1 12s.	£6 8 0
Occasional travelling of other members of family and servants	3 5 0
	£9 13 0
Increase per month of	£3 11 8

These alterations will deprive myself and family of the conveniences of the railway, the increase alone being nearly sufficient for the keep of a horse and buggy to enable me to back wards and forwards, which mode I must in the meantime adopt, and, looking as I do, upon the cost of transit as an addition to rent, this large increase will make this item beyond my means, and compel me to seek some other neighbourhood nearer Sydney. The Railway Department will, of course, lose the amount of my payments as above stated; together with an amount probably as large arising from my friends and visitors. But this is doubtless of little or no consideration to the officials, who, lucky dogs as they are, receive their salaries whether the receipts be large or small.

The obvious tendency of this ill-considered and unjust proceeding will be, not only to deter new residents, but be the means of compelling others similarly circumstanced as myself to leave the line, and, to my mind, furnishes another illustration—if such were wanting—of the utter incompetency with which all such matters are conducted by Governments. Private enterprise would work the line in such a way as to ensure the largest possible return; and to accomplish this, the public convenience would be studied, and instead of repelling traffic, advantages would be offered to fixed residents along the line, who may in fact be denominated the decoy duck for the larger and more profitable traffic arising from their visitors. Officials, however, do not desire this, seeing that increased traffic would bring increased work, and, consequently, diminish the time now at their disposal for the expenditure of their comfortable incomes.

A BURWOOD RESIDENT.

MUSICAL COPYRIGHTS.

To the Editor of the Herald.

SIR,—An impression has been current in this colony that there was no protection for English copyrights, and some persons have been in the habit of republishing in Sydney any piece of music that happened to be popular, quite irrespective of the rights, and much to the annoyance of the English composers and publishers.

Mr. Chappell, the eminent music publisher of Bond-street, London, being anxious to protect his own interests, represented the state of the case to his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, and received the annexed reply, which is so far satisfactory that we have received instructions from our correspondents to proceed against any persons invading their English musical copyrights in future.

As the question is of some public importance, we venture to ask your insertion of this letter, and oblige

Your obedient servants,

WILKIE, ELVY, and CO., 321, George-street.

June 26th.

Downing-street, March 31st, 1863.

Sir,—I am directed by the Duke of Newcastle to acquaint you that your representation of the 19th instant was referred for the consideration of the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade, as it is peculiarly within their lordships' province to consider questions relative to the protection or the invasion of copyrights.

In reply, his Grace has been referred by their lordships to the 15th section of the Act to Amend the Law of Copyright, 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 45, which enacts that "if any person shall, in any part of the British dominions, after the passing of this Act, print, or cause to be printed, either for sale or exportation, any book in which there shall be subsisting copyright, without the consent in writing of the proprietor thereof, ... " such offender shall be liable to a special action on the case, at the suit of the proprietor of such copyright, to be brought in any court of record in that part of the British dominions in which the offence shall be committed."

By the second section of the same Act, the words "British dominions" are explained to include all the colonies, settlements, and possessions of the Crown.

Their lordships have further pointed out that the provisions of the Act in question, with respect to the importation into a colony of a foreign reprint of a work of a British author, have undergone some modification by the Act 10 and 11 Victoria, cap 95, but that no alteration appears to have been made in the enactment before quoted.

It is, therefore, presumed that, under that enactment a British author would have his remedy in any colony in Great Britain against piratical publication.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

FREDERICK ROGERS.

Mr. Thomas Chappell, 50, New Bond-street.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY ON BISHOP COLENSO.

His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury has sent the following reply to an address signed by a large number of the clergy of his diocese:—

"TO THE CLERGY OF THE DIOCESS OF CANTERBURY, SUBSCRIBERS TO THE ADDRESS.

"Addington-Park, March 31.

"My Rev. and Dear Brethren,—I must no longer delay to convey to you my acknowledgments for the address you have presented to me on the subject of the recent publications of the Bishop of Colenso, as well as my cordial thanks for the expressions of respect and affection with which you have approached me.

"I cannot be surprised at the feelings of sorrow and indignation with which you view those works, as impugning, in your judgment, the authority of the Holy Scriptures, and as derogatory to the person, the attributes, and the work of our Divine Redeemer: for happily it is without precedent that such published opinions should have emanated from a bishop of the Church of Christ. But it is satisfactory to be assured that the principal objections advanced by Bishop Colenso are for the most part puerile and trite,—so puerile that an intelligent youth who had read his Bible with care could draw the fitting answers from the Bible itself; so trite, that they have been again and again refuted, 200 years ago by Archbishop Usher, one of the most learned annalists of this or of any other country; more recently by Bishop Watson and others.

"To the diligent student of God's Holy Word then, who looks for light and guidance from above, the books to which you refer are absolutly harmless: but they are pregnant with mischief to the ignorant, the half informed, and to all who rejoice in anything which can free them from the troublesome restraints of religion. A Bishop of the Church has spoken, and that is enough; they will drink in the poison, and never trouble themselves to seek the antidote or study the replies.

"The impressions which you have received from these works are widely shared by the Church at large. It seems to be generally felt that the Pentateuch is so closely interwoven with the texture of the Bible that it is impossible to wrench it from its pages without tearing the Bible itself to pieces, or to deny its authenticity and veracity without charging Him who knew what was in man with ignorance and imposture; so that if the Saviour be no longer Truth, He can no longer be the Way or the Life; and, robbed of the blessings of the Gospel, we are to be turned adrift to seek what light and comfort we may from the blindness and barrenness of natural religion.

"Influenced by such convictions you invite me to take the necessary steps for upholding the belief in the inspired Word of God, and for vindicating the Church of England from the scandal which attaches to her in consequence of the recent publications of one of her bishops. But you are not perhaps aware that in the case of the Bishop of Natal the primary jurisdiction rests with the metropolitan of Southern Africa, the Bishop of Capetown. This prelate has just returned to his province, and is prepared to institute those judicial proceedings which will try whether the charges brought against Bishop Colenso can be sustained. It is not for me to anticipate the judgment which may be delivered in his case; but you are aware that he has refused to resign the see of Natal, although he cannot deny that he is unable to exercise the most important function of that office, and persists in disseminating as bishop of his diocese, opinions which derive their chief weight from the office he still holds in connexion with the Church of England. Under these circumstances it becomes my painful duty, in conformity with the rule of discipline in our Church when proceedings are about to be instituted against any clerk by reason of conduct which causes great scandal, to caution all the clergy of my diocese against admitting Bishop Colenso into their pulpits, or allowing him to minister in the Word or Sacraments in their respective parishes, until he shall have cleared himself from the grave imputations which at present attach to him.

"In conclusion, I must tender you my grateful thanks for your kind expressions of sympathy with me under my present trials, and for the promise of your prayers, that I may have wisdom and strength from above to guide me safely through them. These will, I humbly trust, in answer to our prayers, be granted to me; and in full confidence that the events which have called forth your address will work together for the good of the church of Christ, and that the inspired Word of God will be proof against these renewed assaults,

"I remain, my rev. and dear Brethren, your faithful and affectionate Friend and Brother,

"C. T. CANTUAR."
